DEMANDS AVIATORS BE FREED

State Department Gives Permission for Squadron to Cross Border

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The United States has made a peremptory demand on Mexico for the immediate release of the two American Army aviators, captured by Mexican bandits in the Big Bend district of Texas and held in Mexico for $15,000 ransom.

Immediately following the disappearance of the two aviators, American army officers on the border, it was learned today, were informed by a Mexican peon of the general whereabouts of the Americans who were described as "entangled" in a canyon.

Officers of the Southern command at once communicated with the State Department and asked if it would be proper to send a squadron across the line to the rescue of the men. The State Department sanctioned such a procedure, but officials of the department today were without advices as to whether troops had been sent across. They referred inquiries to Secretary of War Baker, who refused to discuss the situation at this time.

The State Department today telegraphed the American Embassy in Mexico City, instructing the charge there immediately to lay the case before the Carranza government.

He is instructed to demand that the Mexican government at once take such steps as will safeguard the lives and secure the immediate freedom of the two army aviators.

The American charge was instructed to present to the Carranza government the seriousness with which the United States views the capture of the two American aviators and was

BAKER FOR BIG ARMY IN CRISIS

Secretary Urges Bill to Prepare for Emergency During World's Unrest

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 18.—"The disturbed state of the world" demands that the United States maintain a large army, Secretary of War Baker told the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate today, when he appeared before it in behalf of the army reorganization bill, providing for a permanent army with an enlisted personnel of approximately 507,000.

The disturbed state of the world is one that no imagination can express," Secretary Baker said, "I would not feel that I would be doing my duty unless I strongly recommend the maintenance of a sufficiently large army.

"I feel a certain hesitancy in discussing the size of the army," Secretary Baker said. "Our suggestion is that the number of men in this bill provides for a balanced army on that if the emergency comes our problem will be to multiply rather than add to the existing forces. Whether the number selected is absolutely necessary I am not able to say now."

With regard to the proposed reorganization, Secretary Baker said he was still studying the situation and that the proposed bill will not incorporate his "final views."

"The new army must be a more useful army than the old army," Secretary Baker declared.

"Regarding our military policy I believe that the people are going to insist on having an army more useful than heretofore," he said. "A good deal of the time of the army in the past was spent in unproductive idleness. The country will not stand for that sort of thing and the soldiers will not stand for it."

Secretary Baker advocated provisions of the bill which would make the army an educational institution and favored the proposed system of universal education.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 18.—The organized steel and iron workers employed by the United States Steel Corporation have voted overwhelmingly to strike, according to William Z. Foster, secretary of the national committee appointed by the Federation of Labor for the unionizing of the industry.

Foster said today that the strike vote would be given out when the nationa committee meets in oYungstown, O., on Wednesday. The chief demand against the Steel Corporation is the recognition of the union.

United States Steel Corporation officials claimed previously to the balloting that only a small percentage of their employes were members of labor unions.

The first serious labor trouble in steel plants was at Homestead, Pa., in 1892, and prior to the organization of the United States Steel Corporation

W. agitators are said to have been wounded in three pistol fights which the police waged with the would-be terrorists. A woman giving the name of Anna Matlowitz is one of those under arrest. The police say she led the agitators into a Thompson restaurant and, crying, "I am a real Russian Bolshevist," attempted to jump over the counter to attack the employes.

NEW YORK TIED UP BY STRIKE

Fifteen Thousand Street Car Men Out; Storm Adds to Troubles

New York, Aug. 18.—The worst transit strike in the history of New York has the city paralyzed today. Defying an injunction issued by Supreme Court Justice Lydon, 15,000 employes of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company's subway and elevated lines went out on Sunday, but it was not until today that the full force of the strike's stranglehold was felt.

Surface cars in Manhattan were running, but no attempt was made to operate cars on the subway and elevated lines. They have been no disorders. Six thousand regular policemen and reserves were distributed through the city to prevent rioting.

The first accident resulting from the strike occurred at 5th street and Third avenue, when an "emergency jitney" crashed into an "L" pillar, injuring nine persons.

A heavy rainstorm which swept the city today added to the difficulties and discomforts of tens of thousands of men and women who were trying to get down town to work.

The city is operating 700 passenger motor trucks and taxicabs, but they

British Sea Control Menaces Labor in America

ARTICLE NO. 2

THE MENACE TO AMERICAN LABOR FREEDOM OF THE SEAS OR UNEMPLOYMENT?

By EDWARD F. McSWEENEY.

Member of the Advisory Committee of the Irish Victory Fund and National Office Friends of Irish Freedom.

Secretary Lansing made two statements in his testimony before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, either of which is sufficient to justify the defeat of the League of Nations as being inimical to the future of American commerce.

One was that the "freedom of the seas was not discussed." While it later appeared in President Wilson's belated submission of his draft that a weak and innocuous mention was made of this subject, it did not even skim the surface of "navalism," the real menace of world peace. And the other: that the secret treaty between England and Japan, by which England gave something she did not own to a nation which had no right to receive it, was known before the terms of the peace treaty were decided, and objection was made against it to Mr. Wilson, without effect, by himself and his colleagues.

When the nation contrasts the verbal chastisement which Mr. Wilson gave Italy over the Fiume claims, largely of academic interest to this country, with his concealment and final indorsement, against the advice of his colleagues, of the pro-English anti-American sat-throne and decency Shantung deal, it must be admitted that the American people have shown wonderful patience, although there is little doubt of their resentment and determined opposition, which will be shown in the final action of the United States Senate.

The President has decided, however, that the league must go through, whatever happens, and, with his marvellous skill in phrasing, dragged into his address to Congress on the "Cost of Living" an appeal to wage-earners to come to his assistance. Before doing this, workmen and manu-

FOOD HOARDERS ARE FACING ARREST

Wholesale arrests of food profiteers and hoarders are expected here as a result of evidence which will be laid before the Federal Grand Jury in the Postoffice Building tomorrow.

Further raids and seizures also are expected, following the visit to the South Boston warehouse where 15,588 bags of flour were seized by Federal officers.

Agents of the Department of Justice have collected a mass of information concerning profiteering and hoarding in New England, all of which will be turned over to the grand jury for consideration.

Action against the rent profiteers is also anxiously awaited by hundreds of tenants in Greater Boston, who are expecting a report from the Commission on the Necessaries of Life on their investigation into individual complaints regarding excessive rents now demanded by many landlords, who have also warned of

Special Meeting of City Council to Consider Police Troubles

Fear of an impending crisis in the local police situation was further evidenced today when the captains of the various precincts were summoned to the office of Superintendent Michael H. Crowley, for a secret conference.

At the same time Acting Mayor Francis J. W. Ford called a special meeting of the City Council for tomorrow at the request of Councillor James T. Moriarty, for the purpose of discussing police troubles.

This action was taken after all sergeants of the Boston stations had been called before Superintendent Crowley and given confidential instructions.

It was pointed out that under the laws of Massachusetts the police commissioner has the authority in an emergency to appoint any citizen a special policeman to serve without pay with or without the citizen's consent.

It would, therefore, be perfectly feasible under the law, it was stated, for Mr. Curtis to discharge the union men and then swear them in as special officers without pay. Failure to obey on their part would be a violation of the law, and punishable as such, as lack of police protection could be regarded as an emergency.

New York, Aug. 18.—Stories of horrible atrocities alleged to have been committed by British soldiers in suppressing disorders in Egypt, are contained in copies of fifteen affidavits submitted to the peace conference at Paris by Zagloul Pasha, head of the Egyptian peace delegation, and just received here.

The affidavits and records are alleged to be official documents, and are not mere statements of the troubles in Egypt, where more than 800 natives are alleged to have been killed by British troops while demonstrating in protest against the deportation of Egyptian leaders. A piece of the by-line in Cairo is given briefly by Zaglool Pasha in the Premier Conference proposals.

HAD TO WELCOME TROOPS

The following is a copy of a sworn statement, part of the evidence submitted to the peace conference:

"On Sunday, 30th March, 1919, I was informed by the policeman on duty at the Sharia Abdel Aziz, Bab el Louk, Cairo, that a message came to the Ministry of Public Instruction informing all officials of the suspected agitation of the opposite political party, and that the railway line, the telegraph, telephone and electric wires, moreover, the new coal mines in the suburbs of Helwan were in danger of being cut by the extremists.

"The mayor then did his best in getting the required laborers, and on the 31st March, 1919, I was informed by the Mayor of Cairo that I should be advised all the inhabitants to welcome the forthcoming soldiers and to treat them well in order to avoid the unpleasant consequences which might possibly occur. We, as the police officers, Arabs and Bedouins, never resort to absolute violence.

SOLDIERS LOOT VILLAGE.

"The train arrived at 4 p. m. and stopped at a distance south of the village. Officers were then invited to the station by the Mayor, in the presence of the guard, the gates were opened and the soldiers were allowed to enter the village and we feared the bad results of their so doing. The Mayor, therefore, tried to prevent them and I myself, the village police officer and three other officials went to the station to meet the officers. We found them in a state of fury and they were shouting and crying out, 'Where are the rebels?' We answered that there were no rebels in the village, but they would not believe us and struck the village police officer on the head with a stick in the hand and gave the soldier no chance to be able to block the blow.

HUSBAND SHOT DEAD.

"The soldiers then began to attack the houses, killing inhabitants grasping, looting and burning. They then ordered all the people under their guard to remain in the buildings, animals and people and shouted that a general massacre would be made. My father and I then came to our house and succeeded in reaching it, but on the way my father was shot dead and I was ordered to my father's house.

"My father then opened the door and the soldiers together with his guard, officers, civilians, artillery and several over, seemed to search for arms. But as there were none, they did not like anything from the house, but took my father's money and left. I was then ordered to go out and then at 12 noon I saw my father's corpse in the house.

BURIED ALIVE AND SHOT.

"I heard what the soldiers had done with five of the inhabitants, namely, Sheik Abdel Aziz Abdel Ghafar Nofal, his brother, Abdel Rehim Ibrahim Talha, his son, Said Abdel Ghafar Talha, and two others, Khalaf Hamad and Abdel Samad el Sayed Ahmed, who were buried alive in their houses, they were shot afterward and dragged with bayonets. I saw them dragged for burying as I was then at 12 noon and then at 4 p. m. I know all this.

I saw them dragged for burying as I was then at 12 noon and then at 4 p. m. I know all this.

"The inhabited and forty-four houses were burnt, and to our knowledge seven persons perished in the fire, twelve were wounded, one of whom died. It is very probable that the casualties were more than that as most of the houses were totally burnt, and the ashes have not been examined. Arabs and Bedouins never resort to absolute violence.

CHILD IN ARMS SHOT.

"I was about to proceed to break the door of my neighbor, that of Nasla Nassan Mansha, but they were unable to do so. Then they entered the village and fired at random. I went it onto a roof where they found that el Nouh and his wife, Wakda Ibrahim Talha, who was carrying her child a year old.

"The soldiers attempted to seize her, and on her resistance pushed one of them shot him and he died the next day. She fled to the upper room, but the soldiers followed and caught her. She thought when she had her child in her arms on her shoulders, to the soldiers, she might attract their mercy and pity toward her and thus escape the fire. She then stretched her arms with the child between them, the soldier then shot the child and the bullet pierced the right shoulder. He did not die and is still under treatment.

SET FIRE TO VILLAGE.

An affidavit from Ibrahim D. Abasa an official of the town of Giza states that the woman, Wakda Bint el Hasin, came to him and corroborated the above affidavit regarding the mistreatment.

Another affidavit from the Mayor of Giza on the affair at Chobak follows in part:

"On Sunday evening, the 30th of March, 1919, an armed train arrived in the village of El Chobak, carrying British soldiers, in charge of repairing the railway lines. Immediately on leaving the train, the soldiers commenced seizing fowl, sheep and other property of the inhabitants and looted upon them. Afterward they began to grossly insult the women of the village, those who had tried to protect her from their revolting behavior, had a quarrel with them. For this they set fire to the village and set fire to it on every side. Those who tried to escape from the conflagration were shot.

OFFICIALS STRANGLED.

"The soldiers then invited the Sheikh and four notables of the village to follow and explain to the commander of the train. These men were then strangled and buried up to their necks in the ground. Then they were covered with burning straw and set fire to. Nothing was left of them but ashes.

"The soldiers then proceeded to the house of the Mayor of Giza and ordered him to come out. He refused to do so and they broke down the door and entered the house. They then seized the Mayor and treated him in the same manner as the officials mentioned above.

"The soldiers then proceeded to the house of [illegible] and ordered him to come out. He refused to do so and they broke down the door and entered the house. They then seized the Mayor and treated him in the same manner as the officials mentioned above.

"The soldiers then proceeded to the house of [illegible] and ordered him to come out. He refused to do so and they broke down the door and entered the house. They then seized the Mayor and treated him in the same manner as the officials mentioned above.

"The son of [illegible] by Zenab Bint Kassim of [illegible] stating that [illegible] and his daughter and that when her husband pleaded with them they turned him out and set fire to the house. The next day she found her husband buried up to the neck and found him hauled up to his waist, while pressing his side and the cord of another affidavit regarding the events mentioned in the above statement that she was raised up and her daughter-in-law was dragged by the hair from them when her husband and son rushed to their assistance they are severe friends of them and killed both of them."

Hussein Sayed el Kadi, aged twenty of Chobak, in another sworn statement, records the same British and Arab forces. "Then the soldiers attacked the village and proceeded to do as they pleased." [illegible] companions what they in the end the affidavit says, [illegible] and [illegible] the back of my head, forced its way out through the front of [illegible] and died instantly.

WOMEN WERE UNPROTECTED.

Hussein Sayed el Malki, forty-six, a merchant, of Chobak, declares in a sworn statement that he was also interrogated before his eyes and adds:

"I think no woman escaped that disgrace as I saw the soldiers going to the village from the afternoon until the next morning while [illegible] of the village fled."

An affidavit from Mahmud Bardisi Abdel Rahman, of Chobak, asserts that after two soldiers mistreated his sister, Aziza, they shot her and caused a frightful gash in her body, burning the corpse.

Another affidavit was submitted to the Peace Conference from Ibrahim Ramadan, Mayor of Kafr, a copy of which was received in London. It declared that ten British soldiers visited his home, told him that residents of Aziza had attacked a British officer and that the British were going to burn the village. The affidavit says the village was then surrounded by soldiers in solid, and the inhabitants ordered to leave.

DEMANDS U. S. LEAD MOVE TO FREE EGYPT

Folk Charges Great Britain Has Seized Egypt as a Possession

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Demand that the United States small lead the movement to secure eventual independence for Egypt today was made in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri.

Folk, as counsel for the Egyptian delegation appointed by the legislative assembly of Egypt, had filed with the committee a brief flatly charging that under the guise of a protectorate over Egypt, Great Britain has really annexed it as a permanent possession. Inserting in the treaty an annex, section 6, article 1, Great Britain expressly repudiates and "renounces the system of capitulation in Egypt established by the treaty of Aug. 1914."

As asserted the Great Britain is attempting to make the status quo ante the "final question" would deny to the League of Nations any jurisdiction over Egypt. It is opposed throughout the brief by the Egyptian committee. Various to have the League finally pass upon the status of the country and grant it absolute independence.

Coming as it does directly upon the heels of the revelations by the International News Service of the atrocities of the British soldiers in suppressing the Egyptian uprising, the Folk brief has had the effect of attracting national attention to the fact that Egypt, with Ireland, Korea and other smaller principalities is making a hard fight for principles of self-determination.

The problem of these smaller powers is to be made the subject of several speeches on the floor of the Senate when considered. Effort will be made to amend the peace treaty in such a way as to [illegible] the Folk brief contains a resume of the [illegible] to regard the military [illegible] of Egypt as a [illegible] that country to enforce British rule [illegible] lawful [illegible] culminated [illegible] in the killing of 800 and the wounding of 1,000 Egyptian natives in March in the course of [illegible] and villages while holding demonstrations calling for a free Egypt.

GOVERNMENT WITHOUT CONSENT.

The brief makes the following allegations:

That the Egyptians are governed by Great Britain, without their consent.

That while in 1882 Britain pledged that occupation would be only temporary, it has continued to the present against the protest of the Egyptian people.

That Egyptian troops to the number of one million fought with the allies during the world war because they expected the object after the war was won of self-determination and this is not being denied them by Great Britain.

That legally elected Egyptian delegates to the Paris peace conference were interned at Malta by the British government's order and were held there until a British protectorate over Egypt had been written into the treaty by the Paris conference.

SENATOR BORAH STIRRED.

Demand that the United States take action on the grounds of humanity to protect "subject people" from atrocities were voiced here today by Senator William E. Borah. The senator stated that he is determined to force action by the United States in behalf of the Egyptians, persecuted by Great Britain and the Koreans, persecuted by Japan. The information upon which the senator's demand is based was gleaned through reading the affidavits and report of the Egyptian delegation to the big nations.

The United States could not stand idly by and allow such persecutions to stand without sorry protest.

arrive at Pemberton square were J. P. Cheney of Precinct 4, Matthew J. Dailey of Precinct 11, Richard Fitzgerald of Precinct 2 and James E. Hickey of Precinct 7. After being closeted with the superintendent they hurried back to their stations, refusing to comment.

The sergeants, who had been specifically cautioned against talking with newspapermen, were equally reticent beyond saying that the conference was in the interests of "harmony."

The same shrinking from publicity was manifested by Mr. Peel and Commissioner Curtis, neither of whom would make any statement regarding the conferring meeting. It is understood however that a number of Boston officials are desirous of having Commissioner Curtis ousted.

Superintendent Crowley said that he did not care to make a statement at this time, but that it was a matter of fact no statement was necessary.

GENERAL WALKOUT IMPENDS.

If Police Commissioner Curtis makes good his threat to discharge members of the police union and dismisses even a single man, 80,000 members of organized labor in Boston will walk out immediately and will return only when they have received an apology.

That is the situation confronting Boston today as a result of the refusal of the Boston Central Labor Union to declare a general sympathetic strike if the policemen go out. As the policemen have declined to strike as soon as the first man is discharged, organized labor has had in its power to precipitate at once the greatest economic disturbance this city ever knew.

There is a possibility, and it is by no means remote, that the walkout may be in the throes of a general strike without police or fire protection by midnight. It is not likely that in that period it is expected the policemen will be called by the union before the announcement that they are now members of the American Federation of Labor and that the commissioner then executes his avowed intention of dismissing those guilty of disobedience to his order. In general strike will become a reality, according to labor leaders.

Commissioner Curtis today gave no indication of what he will do next. Members of the board are of the opinion that he will do nothing despite the fact that Attorney Coolidge has announced that the commissioner's policy has his support. "Wait before you act," is the advice they have given the commissioner. "Wait at least six hours, and the election of officers of Commissioner Curtis will probably be accomplished within that period.

told to impress on the Mexican government that "immediate and adequate action is necessary."

The State Department also directed the American consul at Juarez to take all possible steps with the Mexican authorities there to secure the release and protection of the American officers.

The government still is uncertain as to facts surrounding the capture of the aviators, Senator Fall, chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs Committee of the senate, whose Senator Thomas of Colorado inquired of the secretary concerning the case.

There is some uncertainty, Secretary Baker answered. "We are not certain whether the two aviators in Mexico in Mexico are the American aviators who kidnaped the Mexican bandits, as it is claimed. I would rather not discuss the case any further than it has already been publicly discussed."

Senator Sutherland of West Virginia remarked:

"It is merely another instance of the inability of the Mexican government to protect American citizens."

The aviators were captured near Candelaria, Texas, by patrolmen on the border, the State Department announced.

Bandits Threaten Death to U. S. Fliers Unless Ransom Is Paid Today

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 18.—Efforts of two men being escorted by army officials here today to secure more time in which to get to Mexico bandits who are holding Lieutenants Paul H. Davis and Thomas G. Foltz of the United States Army Aviation Corps, the $15,000 ransom demanded by today for their release, were unsuccessful.

A message received at headquarters of the Army unit at Fort Bliss last night from the two aviators, stated that the brigands would put them to death today unless the money was forthcoming.

Immediately after Brigadier-General James B. Erwin published a statement reciting the message from the airmen, plans were put under way to raise the ransom. Cowboys and cattlemen at a camp meeting at Fort Bliss contributed the $15,000 in less than fifteen minutes. They were notified, however, that payment of the penalty would take care of the ransom.

At the same time a message was received by Colonel Langhorne, commanding at Marfa, from S. G. Peterson of Hutchinson, Minn., father of Lieutenant Peterson, stating that the amount demanded by the bandits had been forwarded to Marfa by him.

Dawkins Kilpatrick, storekeeper named to receive the money at the request of army authorities, had sent a message to the bandits urging them to postpone the time limit for the payment of the ransom as the money was being raised, but owing to the late receipt of their demands it might be impossible to get it to them at the time prescribed.

still greater increases to commence September 1.

Today the sale of surplus army food through the medium of the parcel post began and the postoffice officials were swamped with mail orders from eager householders for large and small quantities of the canned goods.

Hundreds of cases and bags of foodstuffs, which are to be sold in this manner, have been laid aside to fill the orders.

An interesting item in the high cost of living is contained in a recent bulletin of the American Chemical Society, which calls attention to the fact that, in these days of high priced fruits and vegetables, sprouted grains, beans and peas are excellent substitutes. According to the society, these substitutes contain the much needed vitamines, that invisible power which adds to the nourishing quality of food and is often destroyed by improper methods of preserving, canning or cooking.

The sale of bargains was continued at the South Boston supply base today.

"Fair Price List" To Be Issued by the State Board

To aid housewives to detect when they are being imposed upon by profiteering dealers, the State Commission of the necessities of life will publish a "fair price list" covering vegetables, meats and other foodstuffs, it was announced today.

The announcement followed a request from the Department of Justice that the commission co-operate with it in the campaign to reduce the high cost of living. The list probably will be completed within that period.

"OLD DOBBIN" AGAIN.

Strong sorrow over the crowded thoroughfares during the rush hour hour served to illustrate strikingly how much punishment the average workingman and horse can and will stand and keep on smiling.

Hundreds of toilless trucks, motor and horse driven, were loaded with all degrees of humanity, men and girls sitting flat on the floor while the deluge of rain descended from head to feet. And yet the dominant street noise was not a curse, but a joyful shout from all the men and sniffle giggles by girls. The spirit of merriment defiance of the swirling downpour.

The sight of hundreds of thousands of happy people was a thing to thrill the hundred streets, many having come long distances, thawed the hearts of many automobile owners and for the first time in the memory of the oldest "cop" in New York not one of their confreres to stop and pick up less fortunate pedestrians.

were only a drop in the bucket when it came to handling the enormous crowds.

HEED MAYOR'S APPEAL.

In response to Mayor Hylan's personal appeal to the strikers, a delegation of two members of the I. R. T. Brotherhood, who opposed the strike, called at City Hall and left a letter stating that "at least fifty per cent. of the men would be glad to meet the Mayor and have the strike settled in his hands."

Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon, who was partly instrumental in ending the Brooklyn Rapid Transit strike a little more than a week ago, took a hand today. He summoned representatives of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and a delegation from the strikers to meet him this afternoon for an investigation.

The I. R. T. submitted to the strike with astonishing completeness and no efforts were made to run cars with strikebreakers. In this connection changes have been made that the officials of the company were secretly in favor of the strike because they could capitalize it in their campaign for an eight-cent fare in New York city.

Over 3,000,000 use the I. R. T. subways and elevated lines in a single day. The Amalgamated Association of Electric and Street Railway Employes has disclaimed all responsibility for the strike. The Interborough Rapid Transit Brotherhood, which called the strike, is not affiliated with the A. F. of L. and has been laid aside to fill the orders.

"This is not our strike," said P. W. Shea, vice-president of the Amalgamated.

Harry Jones, the Amalgamated organizer from Paterson, N. J., referred to it as "a personally conducted affair and a joke."

The strikers are demanding a fifty per cent. wage increase and an eight-hour day. They declare that the discontent caused by the tie-up of the lines in the first hours of the strike would work in their favor.

The injunction, which was secured through the efforts of Mayor Hylan, is returnable before Justice Lydon in the Supreme Court at 10:30 this morning.

District Attorney Martin of New County is investigating the allegations that officials of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and officers of the Brotherhood are in collusion and that the company is giving financial aid to the strikers. The strikers in the case of strikes, the interborough are compelled to wait for one or two days before they can begin to collect benefits from their union. Members of the I. R. T. Brotherhood have announced that they will begin to receive money right away.

Branch Postoffices Swamped by Rush to Buy Army Food

So great was the demand for army food by parcel post in Boston today that lines of applicants formed early at the branch postoffices of the district. Postmaster Hurley assisted the public by having blank forms printed. These saved housekeepers much time and bother and the expense of furnishing their own stationery.

It was announced at the central postoffice that additional food articles were soon to be made available at the army supply base for purchase by mail orders.

A special force of clerks has been assigned to handle the food mail orders which are pouring in from the various states of the Boston Postal District. The work is being done in two rooms set apart for the purpose at the central office. Applicants may obtain blanks and information at room No. 128, Federal Building. Orders totalling 125 pounds can be purchased by parcel post. Hundreds are taking advantage of this method to beat the high cost of living. Those living in remote districts, who are unable to visit the supply food stations, are finding the parcel post a big convenience.

BEGIN FIGHT TO FREE BOY ACCUSED OF KILLING SWEETHEART

HALT HUNT FOR GIRL'S BODY

Storm Delays Searchers in Lake; Habeas Corpus for Student

Ithaca, Aug. 18.—Declaring the holding of Donald W. Fether for the September Grand Jury to be an outrage, counsel for Dan Enderlin, accused of murdering his sweetheart, pretty eighteen-year-old Hazel Crance, announced that they expect to have him freed Tuesday through habeas corpus proceedings.

A writ was signed by Supreme Court Justice Michael H. Kiley, directing Sheriff Charles Green to produce the defendant before him for a review of the dramatic hearing held Saturday in the century old town hall at Ulysses.

The writ was obtained by Attorneys A. W. Feinberg and Riley H. Heath, who motored through a driving rainstorm to the home of Justice Kiley at Cazenovia. The scene of the legal battle now being fought over the young Cornell sophomore will sniff from Ulysses to Cazenovia today.

EXPECT TO FIND BODY.

The waters of Lake Cayuga, in which Miss Crance is believed to have been drowned the night of July 18, while canoeing with Fether, were too rough to be permit grappling for the body near the buoy, where Fether's knotted paddle were found.

Edward Crance, father of the girl for whose alleged murder Fether has been held by the grand jury, despite the fact that her body has not been found, thinks the body has been buoyed.

"We expect to find the body today. Together with many who were grappling, we are positive we had held of the body Thursday night, when we found the paddle, but it slipped away from us then. It is now somewhere beneath about 250 feet of water where the long mark is buoyed.

"When it is recovered we are sure we can determine just what happened to my little girl. The water down there is cool and the body will be well preserved."

Fether, who had paled when Justice of the Peace Henry Williams of Dryden held him for the grand jury, seems in better spirits.

A telegram apprised the accused student that his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Fether, will arrive from Los Angeles Tuesday morning.

TROUSERS AS EVIDENCE.

Sheriff Green said: "The tying of the trouser legs is evidence of incalculable moment. No man could have done it but a man who went in the water. It is evident that the person who threw them, or "lost" them, in the bushes, knew that a good reason to believe they never would be given up."

Edward Crance, discussing the case, said: "When Fether told my wife and me the same story three times the day after the drowning, he said the trousers had been ripped on one leg and torn off easier. No knife was found on his person or in the trousers, and neither were there any cuts in the garment except a slight hole in one of the pockets where the grappling hook caught."

Sheriff Green is preparing to offer a reward of several hundred dollars for the recovery of the body of Hazel Crance.

BRIDES BY PROXY ARE HELD AT LONG WHARF

Immigration Officials Busy With Aliens Who Arrived on the Canopic

United States immigration officials at Long Wharf were busier today than at any time in the last five years with the hundreds of aliens who arrived Saturday aboard the White Star liner Canopic.

There are 224 of these aliens still detained for further examination. Yesterday 114 were landed. Most of the "questionable" cases are those of illiterate aliens, who claim exemption from the immigration laws on the grounds that they have relatives "domiciled" in the United States already.

Several "brides by proxy" are among those held, and one such bride will have to wait until her husband arrives from California and marries her legally before she will be allowed to land.

The immigration department is short of men with which to handle the situation, as many of its attaches have been loaned to the Department of Justice for the food investigation, and many others have returned to private life.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The Chamber of Commerce of Washington has guaranteed $10,000 for the next annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, George J. Neuner, commander of the National Post, stated today.

The twentieth annual encampment of the veterans began here today with more than 1,000 delegates from France, Germany, England, the Philippines and Hawaiian Islands and all parts of the United States.

One of the features will be the burial of "San Shu" by the Imperial Order of Dragons, all veterans of the Boxer uprising in China. The convention will last four days, with meetings in Infantry Hall.

Among the matters which the organization will go on record as favoring are: Six months' pay for soldiers and sailors in the service of Uncle Sam; opposition to prohibition; anti-deportation for Ireland and a resolution asking for the deportation of all aliens who do not become citizens.

The organization comprises veterans of ten foreign wars, from the Mexican War in 1848, to the present time. The oldest member, who is expected to be present, is Peter H. Madsen, street commissioner of Liggett Post, Redding, Pa., he saw service in the Mexican War.

CALLS GULICK AGENT FOR JAPANESE

Washington, Aug. 18.—Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, who for years has been active in promoting friendly relations between the United States and Japan, and is author of the Gulick immigration bill now before the Senate, is branded as "a paid Japanese propaganda agent" in a statement made public by Senator Phelan of California today.

Senator Phelan specifically charges that Dr. Gulick is acting for the Japanese, in order to secure, if he can, a foothold in this country by dumping them with all other foreigners assimilable and non-assimilable, as cheap and undesirable.

"This charge is an outgrowth of Dr. Gulick's bill, which would permit annually the admission of aliens to this country up to 5 per cent of the population."

WALES LANDS AT 'GATEWAY OF CANADA'

American Naval Men Join in Greeting Him at Halifax, N. S.

By International News Service.

Halifax, Aug. 18.—Edward, Prince of Wales came to the "Gateway of Canada" today and landed on the same ex- where, fifty-nine years ago, another Edward, Prince of Wales, who later became King Edward VII., first set foot in the new world.

A flat, oaken block of stone marks the historic spot bearing the inscription, "H. R. H. Prince of Wales landed here July 30, 1860."

Today the future ruler of the British empires stepped across this stone to greet the lord of the manor of Halifax.

The greetings took on an international aspect and American naval men participated.

ROYAL SALUTES FIRED.

British and French warships in the harbor fired the royal salutes as the prince left one of the mighty forts, adding to the din of the many guns on the hills. Cheers and handclaps and the cheers of the sailors' batteries.

The commanders of the warships were in the greeting party. Hundreds of bands and officers on duty and off were massed before Lord Byng and attention when the Prince came ashore.

The Prince was again in the uniform of a captain in the British navy. He will wear this uniform as long as he is on the Renown, but on shore ashore of the army when he leaves here and goes to Quebec.

At the government house, the young Prince stood on a raised platform in the reception room and there received the addresses of welcome on behalf of the city and province. Lord Byng, as lieutenant governor, his ancestors looked down on him he thanked the officials for the welcome extended him and expressed regret for the calamity which befell Halifax in the great 1917 explosion. Later the Prince visited the devastated region.

PRINCE VISITS WOUNDED.

From the government house the Prince drove to the military hospital where hundred of Canadian soldiers are recuperating from wounds or sickness. After shaking hands with several and asking about their wounds, the Prince was driven to the Commons, where the Nova Scotia veterans were drawn up to inspection.

A selection of troops, the conferring of decorations and similar ceremonies are keenly enjoyed by the Prince, but he meets some of these he knew overseas and always stops for a chat. But the making of speeches and receiving addresses of welcome and veing feased over officials are obviously embarrassing.

The Prince was palpably nervous only when the long addresse of welcomed his sword and fixed his neck with ceremonial collar and gorget. Here he blushed like a school girl as soon as he got among the soldiers and sailors and officers.

The Prince was the honor guest at luncheon at the Waegwolty club. The afternoon program included the cornerstone laying and a public reception at which the Prince was expected to shake hands with several thousand persons.

Women of Germany Urge Release of Prisoners

By International News Service.

Berlin, Aug. 18.—A delegation of German women left for Weimar today to urge the government to release the release of German prisoners in allied countries, after a hysterical mass meeting in this city on Friday when the weeping relatives of many German war prisoners created a scene of great uproar at Bismarck Hall. It was proposed that Germany withhold the payment of coal to France and Belgium as a means to force the release of the prisoners, but this was declared impossible.

Another proposal was that a wireless appeal be sent to the United States and Japan in behalf of the prisoners. The government was bitterly attacked in speeches. It was declared that Spartacist tactics would be used against the government unless the prisoners were released within a week.

BOMBS FROM AIR FIRE DEFENCES OF PETROGRAD

Part of Kronstadt Destroyed in Raid Carried Out by British Planes

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 18.—A raid by British aviators against the defenses of Petrograd was carried out by British aviators, and part of the city of Kronstadt, formerly the chief fortress defending Petrograd on the seaside, was destroyed, said a dispatch from Helsingfors to the Daily Express today.

For fourteen hours from four to eight bombing planes rained tons of explosives upon Kronstadt.

Fires broke out and great sheets of flame and smoke rose skyward. It was estimated that an area two square miles in extent was wiped out.

None of the British machines was hit, though although the Bolshevik gunners kept up a hot fire with high angle cannon. Upon the return to their base, however, three of the machines ran out of gasoline and one British pilot was killed.

The raid was made on Wednesday by British aviators against the defenses of the new Northern government of the Bolsheviki.

The attack was begun by four British seaplanes, the first bombs setting fire to the refuse oil storage tanks.

Then the seaplanes sailed into the outer harbor, the crew was picked up by a British destroyer. Neither machine nor men were injured. Another seaplane left later and one member of the crew, Lieutenant Denman, still is missing. While landing at the Kronstadt airdrome the airplane crashed and the pilot met his fate.

CHAMPION EGG EATER IS NOW IN DISPUTE

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 18.—S. G. Scott, of this city, is hurt over the report that a Pennsylvania man claims to be the champion egg eater of the world just because he got on the outside of forty-eight eggs in twenty-four hours. Scott is a veteran of the Civil War and declares that on a bet he can eat longer than he can forty-seven eggs at one sitting, and when asked to eat another to make it forty-eight accepted the offer that he didn't want to make a hog of himself. "The doctors who say there is as much nourishment in an egg as a pound of beefsteak give me a good feed just the same," said Scott. "I suppose I had eaten forty-seven pounds of steak at that one sitting." Scott says he has defeated numerous thirty-seven eggers during the hour's contest.

Brady of Bowdoin street, Dorchester, and Daniel Kernahan, twenty-two, of Richlaw street, Cambridge, were fined $50 each, while William P. Donovan, twenty-four, of Washington street paid a fine of $20 for assault and battery on Patrolman Richard F. Moryan of the Dudley street station. The others pay the fines.

The policeman stopped several small boys who were driving a horse covered with burlap and ordered them to drive him to the station. Donovan, it is claimed, refused to drive and the two others aided the boys to escape, and then he returned to aid Donovan.

TREATY TIGHTENS BRITISH GRIP ON WORLD TRADE

BOSTON COMMERCE IN PERIL, SAYS M'SWEENEY

facturers should consider the consequences to themselves, their families and the nation.

Mr. McSweeney said that the control of shipping meant control of world trade. To facilitate arrangements for the surplus products of the United States, which is thrown away by the Shantung grant. President Wilson's visit to the Panama Canal to offset the advantages of the opening of the Suez Canal. When it was completed, an advantage to American ships being it was given by law. This displeased Great Britain, which protested without effect until the Democratic administration came into power in 1913, when, in violation of campaign promises, the law was repealed.

Britain was not only mistress of the seas, but could and did control adversely the internal policies of this country designed to encourage and extend our sea power.

Under improved methods of production, tremendously stimulated by the war, the workers of the United States can produce in eight months all that the country can consume in a year. The solution of unemployment and its accompanying evils is in disposing of our surplus products of manufacture in the open markets of the world. The neglect, as admitted by Secretary Lansing, even to discuss at Paris the matter of the freedom of the seas is unthinkable, when we realize that in a United States Senate investigation held in 1911, recorded in several volumes of testimony, it was conclusively demonstrated and admitted by the representatives of the Shipping Trust, that said trust included it was impossible for the United States before the war to build or maintain a merchant marine.

HOW FOREIGNERS HIT BOSTON PORT.

A small body of foreigners sitting in an office in London could, and did, not only determine the price and character of American freight, but could determine and limit the ports in America from which freight and passengers could be sent. Means were provided where competition by independent American trade routes, or companies, was made impossible. Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia were forced to build and maintain expensive marine terminals, the use of which the Shipping Trust received free, while the allied ships receiving these favors had to pay for similar facilities in their home ports.

This was possible only because it was within the power of the Shipping Trust to close to foreign trade any one of these ports refusing to comply with its demands.

Neglect of the United States after the Civil War to maintain its sea strength left it at the beginning of the great war with its merchant marine only two-thirds what it was in 1855, and substantially the same tonnage as the United States had in 1810.

Under Shipping Trust control exports of the United States were restricted largely to the food and raw materials which Europe could not get along without.

As a result of this control the price of products, such as cotton, copper, potash, food, meat and grains was in most cases dominated in England, and in some commodities by England and Germany together.

ENGLAND FLOUTS AMERICAN RIGHTS

During the war England contemptuously disregarded and opposed our business rights. It held up our ships dealing with neutral nations, blacklisted and confiscated our products and refused to permit our doing business with neutral countries while it sold the same kind of goods to these neutrals. In its effort to get control of trade formerly done by Germany, it shut us out of South America. When our progressive manufacturers attempted to build up the dye industry, it put embargoes on exports to the United States of potassash and barks from Central America, all this through its control of the seas.

Cotton grown in the Southern States was sold by English middlemen to continental European manufacturers at a lower price than the same cotton could be bought by cotton manufacturers in New England. Of eighteen millions worth of manufactured cottons imported into the Argentine the year before the war, the United States, the greatest producer of raw cotton in the world, sold but three hundred thousand dollars' worth.

One cannot read a daily paper without seeing various items which indicate that England has her finger in every business pie in all corners of the world.

Further, nothing in the League of Nations prevents—in fact, it encourages—the right of England and Japan to prefer each other in their respective colonies and thus automatically to discriminate against the products of the United States.

Nothing in the league regulates or prevents shipping arrangements to be carried so far as to create lower rates for Japanese and British shipping than for United States commerce.

ANOTHER BLOW TO AMERICAN TRADE

In June, 1916, there was held at Paris an "economic alliance" of the entente powers, which, while the purposes were disguised, was actually designed to substitute a system of trade preferences for the most favored nation relation upon which the commercial intercourse of Europe and America rested before the war.

It was openly stated at this Paris conference that this would operate against the competition of the United States, and carry its commerce below normal equity in world commerce.

The feeling of the British shipping interest toward the United States was expressed in the following quotation under date of August 10, 1916, from Fairplay, the leading journal devoted to shipping finance in England:

"America so far has evaded the fight, but she is bound to recognize two things apparent from the fact that we are not out to be beaten: Firstly, that the nations who win this war, whether they be the allies or the central powers, will not be in a temper to stand any nonsense from any trouble that may arise among combatant countries will represent the most armed forces of the world, and that no one else will be in the running. Secondly, America will appreciate that the allies, pace Mr. Asquith, do intend, where it pays them to do so, to put up a tariff wall between themselves and neutrals. They mean to restore themselves and to become self-supporting—at some expense it may be while the operation lasts, but certainly not for the benefit of neutrals. And if this be so, then America has perhaps a somewhat awkwardly restricted market. She has already experienced the pleasure of a Chinese boycott, but at the close of the war she will be facing as a competitor Japan which economically, financially, and by treaty is a vastly different proposition from the nation which could be openly... during recent Chinese troubles a few years back."

WRITTEN AFTER SECRET PACT WITH JAPAN

The following friendly comment was made shortly after the secret treaty between Japan and England was made and significant that comment is not necessary.

In January, 1917, at the very time when Balfour and Viviani were in the United States pleading with President Wilson for American intervention, a great convention was being held at Pittsburgh by the United States National Foreign Trade Council, at which time delegates from the largest business men in the United States were protesting against the action of the Paris Alliance and devising methods to avert its threatened consequences.

It is a matter of record that the growth in United States exports during the war is a striking indication of increase and that we are on a true basis of progress. It is in fact quite the reverse of the impression which has been created by the propaganda of the British press bureau, which asserts that our trade fell off during the war. Our trade balance during the war on a peace basis went steadily downward. We sold money during the last five years in our foreign trade, but not merchandise.

Nothing practical has been done by the United States government to stabilize our foreign commerce, and the League of Nations threatens it with paralysis.

A most important but little considered factor in British plans is its control of the mechanics of news distribution. Through this power, it could and did during the war refuse to neutral nations the right to communicate with each other on their strictly neutral business and personal matters. Before the war, merchants in the United States complained frequently of interference with their mail and cables.

SO-CALLED "LIBERTY" MEANINGLESS.

While the world is compelled to get the consent of any one nation to sail the seas or freely to communicate with each other, the liberty for which the war was won is a meaningless word. Under date of August 8, 1919, the United States Foreign Trade Council announces the appointment of a committee to take up the matter of American systems of cables and wireless. Present conditions are described as "intolerable."

Any nation that, in addition to control of the seas (which Great Britain has under the league) can dominate the world's food supply of the earth, is double master of the world's destiny. In 1912 James F. Hill called attention to the progressive diminution in food production of the United States, and looking ahead not for a year, but a generation, there is no question but that the United States and Canada are fast getting to a position where they will not be much more than able to feed themselves. The same conditions apply in South America and Australia. If the Peace Treaty and League are approved, England, which cannot produce within its own island boundaries food enough to supply it for more than two months in the year, is in control of the future food supply of the world.

When the attempt was made by Cecil Rhodes to reduce the Boer Republic to vassalage to Great Britain, afterwards successful, after one of the most iniquitous wars in the world's history, he openly declared it his ultimate purpose to paint the map of the world red, and as the first step to run a railroad line from Cairo to the Cape.

The Treaty of Peace has actually painted Africa red, and it is important for us in this country to know that in Africa there has been turned over to England one of the largest potential food areas left in the world, and American assistance is also being exerted to place Siberia, the second largest potential, unused food supply reg in the world under the control of Great Britain.

WHEN BRITISH ATTITUDE WILL CHANGE

A Great Britain freed from dependence on the food supply of the United States will be a vastly different nation to deal with than a Great Britain which would starve without us.

Since the war the United States has become the creditor nation of the world. If we gauge correctly the sentiment of the people of this country we are safe in assuming that the tremendous debts due the United States by the rest of the world will not be used as a source of exploitation, coercion or oppression, but since we are in the deadliest financial position by virtue of our national resources, there is no reason why we shall permit injustice to be done the people of our country by allowing British financial manipulation to neutralize this situation adversely to our national interest.

England has a floating debt of twenty-seven billions, eight and a half of which comes due this year. There is a balance in favor of the United States of more than four billions. On the ordinary basis of business England is today bankrupt, with internal economic conditions making it worse.

There are signs and portents of a secret campaign now beginning which has for its object the purpose of maintaining not only the interest, but the principal, of the United States war loans. It must be that something of this nature must be agreed to by the United States to save the world, but whatever action is taken must not be to restore England's lost financial leadership, but equally to sustain the credit and economic security of all nations alike. Only a right inquiry by the Congress into these questions, and especially as to the process by which the exchange value of the pound sterling is being maintained at what many believe to be an artificial ratio, at the expense of the United States, will enable the people to deal fairly with debtor-nations, and in the real spirit of world peace determine the problems and responsibilities of the position of the United States as a creditor for the world.

MAY CLOSE FAR EASTERN "OPEN DOOR"

Aside from the hatred being incurred in China, our best friend and most powerful potential partner among the nations, in its sacrifice to the commercial ambition of England's ally and secret partner, Japan, the people of the United States are vitally concerned in the control of the "Key to the Orient" by Japan and England. Hong Kong, the other important entrance to China, is also in control of Great Britain, whose joint control with Japan of Kiaochow will mean the abandonment of the policy of the "open door" established as a result of American diplomacy. It will give monopoly to the two principal competitors of the United States to a market of a half billion people. While the principal opposition to the Shantung pact is based on our betrayal of a friend, the commercial consequences to America of approving any league which shuts it out of the "open door" to the Orient merits serious consideration.

Other items might be added to this protest. The tremendous expansion during the war of the United States Merchant Marine, on an oil burning basis, frees this country from the dependence on English coaling bases throughout the world, which have been the principal sources of her sea strength. The change of motor power from coal to oil would have given opportunity, under real "freedom of the seas," for the United States to compete on a basis of equality.

British control of the oil fuel fields in Russia, China and Mexico should be denied and these localities made free for themselves and the world.

These considerations are presented in the belief that they are American issues vitally connected with the discussion regarding the League of Nations, which, as proposed, settles every one of them adversely to the United States.

If America is true to itself in this crisis, the decision of the United States Senate will transform and purify the politics, policies and business practices of the whole world.

To Be Continued in Tomorrow's Boston American.

BRIDGE FALLS AFTER CAR PASSES OVER

Whitinsville, Aug. 18.—Oscar L. Owen, so far as records show, has the United States record for inventions. His patents have been sold to the Whiting Company to promote the efficiency of various machines and parts of textile machinery.

THEATRE WORKERS ASK MORE PAY IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Aug. 18.—When the playhouses of the city announced that the prices on admissions would go up this week, the theatrical help followed with a demand for more money. Motion picture operators, musicians and stage hands made known their proposed new wage scale Saturday to become effective September 1, basing their claim on the increased living costs.

The managers are disposed to favor the demands rather than occasion trouble and a probable strike, it is claimed.

KING GEORGE IS WORLD JAILER, SAYS WALSH

Member of Irish Commission Protests English Dictation on Passports

New York, Aug. 18.—Charging that the world has become a vast jail, with King George of England as its keeper, Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the American Commission on Irish Independence, issued a statement protesting vigorously against the practice of various countries in allowing England the right to deny passports for their citizens to travel to Great Britain or the possessions.

He demanded that in the framing of the League of Nations a provision be formed so that the rights of any citizen of any country may be protected, instead of leaving the secretariat in charge of so long-distance exclusively and isolating it to the shadow of the palace of Westminster.

Adoption of the League of Nations in its present form, he charges, forces every citizen to sympathize with the "imperialistic ambitions of England" to the entire freedom of the world in the sense that the seas are free. The statement follows:

"The first thing the liberty-loving people of the United States and the world must do is to demand, as a matter of inherent right, that any human being has a right to go freely into any country upon the face of the globe without being subject to the whim or caprice of the jurisdiction in which he happens to be, whether these laws are good or bad.

SUBMITTED TO ENGLAND.

"At the present time the world is one vast jail. The jailer is King George V. Parliament, the British Great Britain, as well as all of the countries in which American citizens have the right to roam, in and from, must go to his palace. Any man or woman who does not throw himself upon the mercies of British imperialism is actually imprisoned within the boundaries of the country in which he or she may be at the time of the discovery of democratic tendencies of thought.

"No Irish man or woman is allowed to leave the shores of England, Ireland, Scotland or Wales except by consent of the English government, which agent is always withheld unless the person is known to be lovers of the imperial spirit. England has now extended her tyrannies in this respect throughout the world.

"John A. Marshall, a distinguished American citizen, desires to go from Paris to London. He has put request to the American State Department to issue him his passport. Mr. Murphy, a resident of Dedham, N. Y., a plain, unassuming citizen, whose whole life stamps him as a man of undoubted reputation and splendid character, but he sympathizes with Ireland in its struggle for freedom and evades entirely the support of the right of self determination for all peoples.

"Mr. Murphy applied to the United States Government, his own country, for a passport to England. The American State Department, in its amazement, submitted his request to the English government. The passport was refused.

"This estimable man must realize, so far as he be concerned, that the liberty is not for him. Liberty can not be defined as merely permitting one to remain outside of a jail or penitentiary, but must be held to be the right of a man to come and go freely, without let or hindrance, anywhere or everywhere agreeable or subject to the laws of any country in which he may be."

Dog Keeps Vigil by the Casket of Quesada

New York, Aug. 18.—Gonzalo de Quesada, one time Cuban chief, went to the United States and became Cuban minister to Germany, died in Berlin two months before the war.

In life the Cuban minister had a very close friend in Pedro—a German shepherd dog. The body of the dead diplomat arrived here on the steamship Neuse Amsterdam, and with it came the faithful Pedro, who has not moved from his master's body since his death.

Sailors on the vessels told of difficult experienced through the dog's refusal to move from the casket when it was taken to and from the ship. The body now rests in state here pending its removal Tuesday to the Cuban steamboat Orizaba.

Pedro still keeps his untiring vigil.

URGES RETURN OF RAILROADS TO OLD STATUS

Sentiment Is Against Public Ownership, Declares George A. Post

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Urging return of the railroads of the country to private operation as soon as practical, legislation can be enacted, George A. Post of New York, chairman of the railroad committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, today presented the Chamber's railroad plan to the House interstate commerce committee.

There is manifest throughout the country a "strong, even overwhelming sentiment against continuance of federal control and operation," said Mr. Post, "due to the unfavorable impression made upon the public mind by the operation of the railroads under federal control."

The proposal for government ownership, advocated by the railroad brotherhoods, was attacked by Mr. Post.

"Groups of business men differ in the details of plans for the railroads," he said, "but in some things there will be found a firm agreement. Government ownership does not prevail."

Having the indorsement of the business men of the country through a referendum vote, the Chamber's plan for the disposition of the railroads was presented by Mr. Post, as follows:

1—Corporate ownership and operation with comprehensive regulation.

2—Return of the railroads to corporate operation as soon as remedial legislation can be enacted.

3—Consolidation of lines in a limited number of strong competing systems.

4—Railroad companies to become federalized, the States to retain taxing and police powers over the properties.

5—Federal regulation of capital expenditures and security issues.

6—Federal regulation of intrastate rates affecting interstate commerce.

7—Statutory rule of rate-making by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

8—Creation of a Federal transportation board.

Air Detectives Are "the Latest" in Germany

Exclusive Cable to the International News Service and the London Daily Express.

Berlin, Aug. 18.—Air detectives are the latest innovation in Berlin police circles. A rich Berlin merchant reported to the police that his daughter had disappeared with a strange man, taking his entire bank account with her. The trail led to Hamburg, as a former army aviator, Max Ortz, was sent in pursuit in an aeroplane. From Hamburg the chase led to Sweinemunde, then back to Berlin, and finally to Westermund. The girl was discovered in a gambling den, where she had lost her entire fortune, but the aviator got his money with him.

FATHER-IN-LAW SUED BY DANCER FOR $100,000

Carlos Sebastian Alleges Alienation of Wife's Affections

New York, Aug. 18.—Another shattered romance of the stage seemingly has come to light through a $100,000 alienation of affections action.

It was learned from Arthur Anderson, partner and manager of Carlos Sebastian, world famous society dancer, that such an action was being brought by the dancer against Charles P. Thompson, banker millionaire, of Chicago and father-in-law of the dancer.

It was said the action will disclose how, in this marriage, the much "father-in-law, instead of the much "mother-in-law" theme, broke asunder the golden strands of a romance which seemed idyllic in every way.

Seven years ago the late Grace Hammerstein found Sebastian dancing at the hotel Sherry in New York. Hammerstein introduced the dancer to Broadway at the then famous Winter Garden, where he remained with instantaneous success.

While the social lion of Chicago's dancing set in 1917, Sebastian met Miss Elizabeth Thompson at the exclusive fashionable South Shore Country Club. It was a case of love at first sight for the young folks, but because of parental objections an elopement was hurried through.

In learning it was not the son-in-law himself, but his profession, that was objected to, Sebastian abandoned the stage and the required $1,000 a week income it brought him, to work as a restaurant in Chicago. He also agreed to an extended farewell tour of Europe and all efforts to continue his career in the line of the terpsichorean art.

At the outbreak of the war Sebastian enlisted in the aviation corps, but was refused examination because he could not be "g disclosed," it is alleged, pleaded in which his father-in-law's influence and affections had been exercised. He has returned to the stage.

FISH FAMINE IN BOSTON COMES TO AN END

Steam Trawler Foam, With 80,000 Pounds of Haddock, Breaks High Prices

Boston's fish famine is over.

The homeward rows of trawlers and draggers tied up since July 3 and refused to put to sea until the end of the strike, began today. By Saturday it is estimated that 2,000,000 pounds of fish will be on sale.

The steam trawler Foam arrived early today with the first big catch since July 3. The Foam's hold carried 80,000 pounds of haddock, which sold quickly at 7 cents the pound, a drastic reduction from the 14 and 16 cents demanded during the strike.

The Foam, one of the Bay State Company's ships, was ordered to return to port today with as large a catch as possible, whether the hold were full or not. The only other trawler in the Monday morning rush to arrive in the hold of the Provincetown schooner Funchal, which was made a quick run to the fishing grounds and back. The Funchal's catch included 9,000 pounds of haddock, and the people of end.

Practically every fishing craft along the Massachusetts shore has been out since Friday, and they will be returning in large numbers daily from now on.

The fish famine grew from misunderstanding, when the Foam arrived in Boston with 80,000 pounds of fish. Fish Pier Corporation. The delegates shortly got the permission of the Bay State Company to go out the Foam and talk with the men. It was explained that the mistake was due to failure on the part of the Fish Pier people to understand orders in effect during the strike.

People Constipated and Don't Know It!

It seems odd, but it is true, that you may be constipated and not know it.

You can see why it is. Take a glass and pour in water until full. If you keep on pouring in water after the glass is full it will run over, but the glass stays full, not with your knowledge, this act fills the bowels and draws the water out of the blood, leaving the body only about the same. What you see is the water in the form of food.

So you may have a movement of the bowels every day and yet there will remain waste matter that ought to be removed.

Give your bowels a gentle but thorough cleaning out and you'll feel great.

A fine prescription for this is put up and sold under the name of Dr. True's Elixir. Druggists and druggists use it in their own families. Costs but little and brings health to men, women and children. Sweet and pleasant tasting. Works gently. Children love it. Remember the name, Dr. True's Elixir.

TRAIN SERVICE ONCE MORE NORMAL

Schedules Restored to Pre-Strike Basis and Freight Is Being Moved

Normal service was resumed on the Boston & Maine and Boston & Albany railroads today, but it may be Wednesday before suburban service is resumed on the New Haven, according to official announcements today.

It was admitted, however, that later developments following the return of the striking shopmen may bring suburban service on the New Haven a bit nearer. Local embargoes are off, but embargoes on foreign lines still continue in a modified form on that railroad.

The freight houses of all roads are piled high with freight which was refused up to a day or two ago with the exception of milk and foodstuffs. Mail is also piled high at the South Station, but it is being rapidly hustled off on trains with the restoration of complete service.

Dining and club cars and extra sleeping cars are being added to through trains to New York and the West. The railroads estimate that their loss from the strike will run into millions, some of which will be made up.

Practically all the striking shopmen of the New Haven returned today, it was stated.

Widow Brings Home Ashes of Husband and His Mother

New York, Aug. 18.—Mrs. William O. Roosevelt, who before her marriage was a scion of Virginia, a family distantly related to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, returned to America from Havre on the steamship France, bringing with her in urns the ashes of her husband and mother-in-law. Her husband was also distantly related to Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her husband and his mother had lived for many years in Baden-Baden, but upon the breaking out of war they were interned by German authorities, after being removed from their palatial home.

The deaths of her husband and his mother, according to Mrs. Roosevelt, who was on the verge of collapse when she landed, were due to the treatment accorded them by the Germans.

Florence Moore, famed as funniest woman on the stage, now a full fledged star in "Breakfast in Bed" at the Plymouth Theatre.

Tonight at the Plymouth, Florence Moore is no woman on the stage with a larger following than Miss Moore has any one who can pack so many laughs into so many minutes.

Miss Moore who was last seen here in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" is said to have the funniest role of her career in this farce which deals with the adventures of a young woman who is passing as a wife in a purely platonic fashion so that the supposed husband can come into a fortune.

Her promotion to stardom is well

Miss Moore herself does not know how she manages to convulse audiences. She says that the people out front have a funny effect upon her. She has no notion of how she will speak a line or make a gesture until she gets before them and then some occult influence creeps over her and

SOX AFTER ST. LOUIS CLEAN UP

Ruth Anxious to Annex Another Home Run in Today's Session

St. Louis, Aug. 18.—The sixth place melting for the 1918 World's champions has been a puzzle to the American League followers. In winning a double-header from the Browns today, the Red Sox explained the mystery. Playing two series here previously this season, they received the defeats and won one victory, because they did not allow the pitching that stopped the opponents a year ago.

In eighteen innings against a club that bore down heavily on batting to stage an old-time "White Sox, the Red Sox annexed two runs. Ruth would have had three, and Mc-Inn worked a wide, enticing curve and nothing else was found for close hits. She or them invited the gate to pay the price. The price came in the sixth when Williams and Severoid counted doubles.

WON ON PITCHING.

Pitching won for the Red Sox. Ruth was pitted against Allen Sothoron, a still rival, and the big southpaw won although outhitting his rival. In the first the Red Sox would use a bunch of hits to get a lead in the power of pitching.

Ruth was master in the second game when Dauss allowed two singles a double and a home run. The Red Sox showed a pinch, a stinging punch, and really looked like the best club in the league. They had the Browns groggy with their vicious attack and they skipped through two games without making a misstep.

Nothing pointed about the former downfall of the Red Sox. They simply lacked pitching and did not have the hitting in the pinch.

HARROW MOANS.

"I can't be beaten when I look back at the early part of the race today," remarked Manager Barrow. "I guess we're too far back to catch us there, but put in four of the games behind the leader and we'd win the pennant. Those games were lost in the pinch, but with Mays and Ruether going around and both leading the league I have no doubt we'll be found hitting when it counts. Ruether is pitching winning ball in the pinch and Mays is getting better every game. Shannon has speed, youth, is almost a .300 hitter and will give us a great infield in 1920.

"For those who say that baseball has not attracted the public as much as in other years, I point to the attendance the two games; it was the largest crowd that ever watched baseball in St. Louis, at least 30,000.

BROWNS STOPPED.

While the Browns are not officially out of the race they can be counted out by the statisticians and Harrow has accomplished something. He has stopped the Browns. "We have the Tigers and the Indians yet to face, and don't be surprised if we hand them the same thing."

The Browns have used their two pitching aces and lost, and they have to rely on Gallia today and Leifield tomorrow to get a victory. Manager Harrow has Allen Russell and Watson ready for the fifth placers.

Harvard Harriers to Race Cornell on Nov. 1

The Harvard and Cornell cross-country teams are expected to clash over the Belmont course on Nov. 1. The managers of the two outfits have completed the details for such a contest. All that remains to do is to get the approval of the athletic associations of the two colleges.

The last race between Harvard and Cornell was held at Ithaca in 1916. The war then prevented any further competition. In that event the Crimson runners journeyed here this year, the Crimson harriers will journey to Ithaca for a return race in 1920.

OLD-TIME ELGIN ROAD RACE TO BE REVIVED

JOEY FOX AND ARTIE ROOT TO MINGLE

Fenway A. A. Selection
Joey Fox to beat Artie Root.

By JACK CONWAY.

Joey Fox, British featherweight champion, will display his dazzling speed at the Fenway A. A. tonight when he opposes Artie Root of Cleveland in a twelve-round bout. Fox is one of the new sensations of the ring.

After winning the Lord Lonsdale belt, Fox came to this country. While under the direction of Johnny Mooney of this city he has been winning regularly. Most of his contests have been over the six-round route in Philadelphia, where speed and aggressiveness to the highest degree are required in order to get the popular award.

Root is among the boxers whom Fox met in Philadelphia. Four newspapers gave the decision to the British champion, while three declared Root had the best of the going. This shows how evenly matched the two boys are.

It is expected that Fox will start forcing the issue in the opening round tonight. This is the kind of campaign he has followed in all of his tussles in American rings.

When Joe Tiplitz was in Boston for his frolic with Johnny Dundee he told the writer that Fox was one of the fastest boxers he had ever seen in action.

"The britisher is a flash," said Tiplitz. "When he's fighting six rounds you would think he was only going to box for three minutes judging by the way he starts after his opponent in the opening sessions. He possesses wonderful vitality, as he is able to keep up the torrid pace for the entire distance.

"I consider Fox a greater fighter than Kilbane. And everybody knows what the featherweight base has accomplished during his many years in the ring."

Root is no stranger to Boston fans as he showed here several years ago as an amateur. He's come along at a rapid clip since joining the ranks of the professionals. Like Fox, Root is eager to become the next feather-weight champion. He has plenty of backers who believe that he can beat the fellow townsman. Before Root can get a match with Kilbane he must first win over Fox at the Fenway A. A. tonight. All of which is some assignment.

An added feature will be a three-round exhibition bout between Jack Hagan, boxing instructor at the University of Pennsylvania, and Spider Kelley, boxing instructor at Princeton.

There will also be a couple of eight round tussles and a six-round match.

WOMEN SWIMMERS SET NEW NATIONAL RECORDS

New York, Aug. 14.—Three American aquatic records were broken here when Miss Charlotte Boyle cut the time for the free style swim to 29 3-s seconds; Miss Ethelda Bleibtre cut three seconds off the 50-yard back stroke when she did it in 33 1-5 seconds, and Miss Ruth Smith did the 50-yard breast stroke swim in 39 2-5 seconds.

14 Chicks from 16 Eggs

Smith Centre, Kan., Aug. 18.—On June 28 George Probst of this city set an Orpington hen on sixteen eggs. On July 12, seventeen days after, she brought a brood of fourteen chicks from the nest.

"TWO AND THREE"

"PUTTING THE NEXT ONE OVER"
WITH "DUGS" DAER

THE sand flappers are still strong for the conservation of natural resources stuff. Last year the Gov. asked them to save cloth and help win the war. The war is cured, but the beach chippies are still saving cloth. Looks like they're trying to win the next war.

DOWN at Nantasket Beach the surf chickens saved so much cloth winning the last war that they started another one. Seems that the frails going swimming down there are wearing costumes that can be put on with a powder puff. Their idea of a dressmaker is the cuckoo who makes the lipsticks. The Nantasket Beach constable is so sore that he can't see. Which is an awful handicap in these days when the looking is so good.

THE constable started his censorship immediately after the big spasm of rain which lasted ten days. St. Swithin came to his aid by driving the chickens into the coop, but when it gets dry, there doesn't seem to be any saints, with the possible of Vitus, who writes the jazz orchestration.

ST. SWITHIN has left on Track Eighteen, leaving the constable to run the works alone.

FIRST thing the constable saw was a flapper in a one-piece suit. Constable took two looks in order to verify the rumor started by the first look, switched his tobacco around his last two remaining teeth and then took another look. Constable states that these three looks were taken as a constable, not as a married man or a citizen.

SAW she had a one-piece suit on which is a violation of the law by at least eleven inches.

HE ordered her to take it off.

NANTASKET BEACH isn't the only seaweed garnee that is after the frails with the frailer swimming trousseaus. Seems that the flappers are wearing those all-wool suits. They call 'em all-wool because they are wool and that's all.

SEEMS that the chickies used all their wool knitting sox, earmuffs and sweaters for the soldiers. Now the haven't any material left to make surf frocks out of but dropped stitches. Which is what most of 'em seem to be constructed of. Incidentally, some of the stitches dropped some distance.

IN order to bilk the law which calls for two-piece suits, the shrills are wearing a combination suit consisting of a jersey and cap. Most of the material is in the cap. Down at Oak Bluffs the prima-donnas are wearing two-piece cuffits. Two socks.

EVERYBODY knows how wool shrinks when it gets wet. A three-piece suit will shrink up into a two-section outfit, a two-piece frock will dwindle into a one-piece costume and a one-piece gown—well, as Hank Ford didn't know that Patrick Henry said, if this be treason, get out your binoculars.

JESS HAWLEY TO AID DARTMOUTH ELEVEN

The Dartmouth College Athletic Council has announced that its football coaching staff for this Fall has been augmented by the engagement of Jess Hawley, and F. A. (Hank) Llewellyn.

Hawley will co-operate with head coach S. W. Spears in an advisory capacity, spending the major part of the season at Hanover, and Llewellyn will act as assistant coach.

Hawley is established in business in Chicago, but has been persuaded to make a sacrifice to give his alma mater the benefit of his expert coaching ability.

As Hawley, Spears and Llewellyn are all residents of Illinois and originally from the West, where they began their football careers, Dartmouth may be said to have an all-Western coaching staff, and its work will be watched with peculiar interest, not only by Dartmouth alumni, but by all football adherents.

TENNIS UMPIRES TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

New York, Aug. 18.—The first annual meeting of the National Tennis Umpires' Association will be held at the Vanderbilt Hotel on Tuesday evening, August 26. Fred G. Anderson is chairman of the committee in charge of the dinner preceding the meeting.

A constitution will be adopted and officers elected, after which there will be a free-for-all discussion of interpretations that have come to the umpires' attention during the season.

Edward C. Conlin is in charge of the officials for the national championship, and has word from about 100 members of the association promising to be on hand for the opening matches, so that there probably will be no shortage of officials.

A detailed record of each man's work will be compiled and prizes will be given to the best umpire, linesman and four-ball judge.

TENNIS STARS IN CHALLENGE MATCH

Upon the skill, speed and coolness of two young American tennis players, one of them only seventeen, today rested the question of whether the national doubles championship of the United States would remain in this country or would be carried away by a pair of Australians. Out on the turf courts of the Longwood Cricket Club at Chestnut Hill, Williams T. Tilden, 2nd, and Vincent Richards defended their title against Norman E. Brookes and Gerald L. Patterson from the land down under, who gained the privilege of challenging the title holders by beating four of America's best exponents of the game.

The Australians were expected to win, but their victory did not seem by any means as certain as it did before they played William M. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin of California in the final match on Saturday. After they had disposed of the veteran Fred R. Alexander and S. Howard Voshell, the visitors appeared invincible. Saturday, however, it became apparent that they were not unbeatable.

They came through so many narrow escapes from defeat at the hands of the pair from California that their victory was not at all indicative of their complete superiority. The native sons should have won, had they not faltered in the pinches, when the Australians were generally always able to steady themselves and play their best. The Australians lost their advantage several times through this weakness, when only a point separated them from winning a set.

In Tilden and Richards the Australians met a pair who have been able to keep their composure at critical moments as themselves. Young Richards is reputed to be one of the coolest players in the game. Like the veteran Brookes, he has the ability to keep his head cool and his arm steady, and to get over his best shots when other older and more experienced players are apt to become muddled.

These same Australians lost a set to Richards, who took their measure in the recent Newport Casino tournament while defeating Wallace Johnston, who is not rated as a first class player in the singles, but Tilden, Richards' regular partner, is. Furthermore it was not the first time that the youthful champions faced veterans against whom they were not supposed to have a chance. Last year they won the title by vanquishing the old Internationalists, Fred R. Alexander of New York and Beals C. Wright of Boston in a five-set match. Opposed to famous veterans the young champions were not at all awed, and the Australian marvels held no terrors for them today

ROCHESTER CLUB NOT LIKELY TO BE SOLD

Rochester, Aug. 18.—Baseball followers here scout the rumors that there will soon be a change in the ownership of the Rochester International League Club. It was reported that the transaction was to involve $80,000, but it is regarded as unlikely that a sale would be negotiated at that figure, for the total investment in the Rochester club represents an outlay of $125,000.

Capablanca in the Lead

Hastings, Eng. Aug. 18.—After six rounds of the International Victory tournament of the British Chess Federation in the Drill Hall here, Jose R. Capablanca of Havana, is leading the masters with a clean score of 6—0. The young Cuban defeated W. Winter of Alton, and Lieutenant R. H. C. Scott of London, in the fifth and sixth rounds, respectively, but has yet to encounter Boris Kostich, of Serbia, his chief rival.

How to Play Baseball

THIS is the seventy fourth of a series of 100 articles by Hugh S. Fullerton, celebrated baseball expert, on "How to Play Baseball." In this lesson Mr. Fullerton continues to tell how to become a base runner. These articles will be a feature of the American's sport pages each day. Don't miss them.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

A base runner trapped between bases has no chance of escape excepting through the errors of opponents. If the defensive team makes the play properly, the runner is helpless, yet the statistics show that one in seven runners so trapped escape the trap. The object of the runner so trapped, therefore, is to make his play so as to give the defensive team the maximum of opportunities to misplay.

It is an axiom in the big leagues that no bad base runner ever is caught. By that they mean that a really poor base runner never takes the chances that will enable the opposing team to catch him, while the good base runner, through daring, often will find holes if, in traps from which only skill, speed and fast thinking will extricate him.

The runner caught between bases should not, at first, attempt to escape through speed. He should remember that, if he alone on bases, his object is to advance if possible and his following should be toward the next base. When first caught he should assume a position facing toward the plate, standing sideways in the line, but ready to swing into a sprinting position in either direction by the pivot of his body.

This swinging start is an achievement in itself and quite different from the sprinter's start. For instance, if the start is towards second the runner swings his body slightly toward first, then throws it violently in the opposite direction, at the same time striding with the left foot as he pivots on the right, so that he is in full stride on the second step.

Do not hasten the play. Watch the man with the ball and the instant he tosses it over to the other player move slowly in the other direction with a sideways, dancing motion. Endeavor to slow up the play as much as possible and compel the opponents to throw the ball over you as frequently as you can. Always turn the face so as to watch the moves of the man with the ball.

If he makes the catch and leans toward you at full speed, swing in the other direction and go at top speed, running high and try to get as close to the player in front of you as possible. By running high the chances of drawing a wild throw, or a high throw or of being hit by the ball are much increased.

If the player with the ball shows an inclination to "drive" you fast, the only hope is in outsprinting him, and the runner who can make the quick, swinging start in either direction has a chance to draw his opponent into chasing him so far that a quick slide may carry him in safety under the receiving player. Many fielders, driving a runner, hold the ball too long and lose their man.

If another player is on bases the object of the trapped runner is not so much to escape the trap as to jockey and delay the play to permit his fellow runner to advance as far as possible before the out is accomplished.

In case the other runner rounds third and starts for the plate before the runner trapped between first and second is tagged out the defending infielder will throw home. The runner between first and second then should leap toward second, round the bag and race for third.

With two men thus trapped between bases the chances of a wild throw being made are much increased. Never remain on any base when another runner is trapped; but advance as quickly as possible and make the play more complicated. It will increase the chance of scoring on an error and often will aid in extricating a fellow-player from the trap into which he has fallen.

PELL AND BEHR BEAT MURRAY AND MATHEY

Greenwich, Ct., Aug. 18.—Theodore R. Pell and Karl Behr defeated R. Lindley Murray and Dean C. Mathey in the finals of the men's doubles in the annual invitation tennis tournament, 6—3, 7—5, 6—2.

Molla Bjurstedt, former woman champion, showed notable improvement. She and Nathaniel W. Niles defeated Mrs. George W. Wightman and Maurice McLoughlin.

Mrs. Wightman and Miss Wagner eliminated Eleanor Goss and Marion Zinderstein in the finals of the woman's doubles in two straight sets.

R. N. Williams won from Wallace Wrenborn in four sets.

CAUSEY AGAIN LEADS NATIONAL'S PITCHERS

The Braves have one leader anyway. Cecil Algernon Causey, who came to the home of vast spaces and shattered hopes in the Nehf deal, again tops the pitchers of the National League by virtue of his victory over the Pirates last week. Causey has eleven victories to his credit and but three defeats charged against him, which gives him a slight shade in the percentage figures over his former teammate, Jesse Barnes, who has achieved seven more wins and has but two more lickings chalked up.

The percentage figures are: Causey .786, Barnes .684.

MICHIGAN FOOTBALL TO START UP SEPT. 15

Ann Arbor, Aug. 18.—Football practice for the Michigan University eleven will get under way this year on September 15, when it is expected more than twenty prospective members of the team will appear. Coach Yost has received word that many of his last year's eleven will return, and, with a number of students who were not eligible last year striving for this year's team, the Wolverine outlook is regarded as decidedly bright.

BRADY AND DUNPHY WIN IN BRETTON WOODS GOLF

Bretton Woods, N. H., Aug. 18.—Mike Brady and Chris Dunphy won from Bert Kiphuk and Leo Hamilton in a foursome match. Brady scored 73.

POUGHKEEPSIE GRAND CIRCUIT MEET OPENS

Poughkeepsie, Aug. 18.—The Grand Circuit meet will open today at the Hudson River Driving Park. The Knickerbocker Purse for 2:06 trotters and the Hudson Valley Purse for 2:06 pacers have been programmed as opening features. In the former, Royal Mack will have another battle with Wilkes Brewer, The Toddler, Busy's Lassie and Heir Reaper. On public form, Direct C. Burnett has the edge on the eligible candidates in the pacing race.

Ethan Early, Little Batiste and Edward P. have not shown enough speed to trim the Direct Hal horse, while Red Bearer, of which so much was expected early in the season, trained off after his Youngstown and Cleveland races.

In the Poughkeepsie Purse, for 2:12 trotters, tomorrow the list of nominations presents the names of McGregor the Great, who won in 2:04¾ at Toledo, as well as The Acme, Hollyrood Naomi and Joseph Guy, all of whom have been keeping him busy in his different engagements.

Martindale, from Thomas W. Murphy's stable, as well as Nedda, with which Harry Fleming won last week at Cleveland in 2:05¾, are other fast ones. This race will be marshalled with the Vassar purse for 2:10 pacers, in which Frank Dewey, Goldie Todd, Schandra and Wellington Direct are named. It will in all probability prove the fastest event at the meeting, with Frank Dewey and Schandra have won in 2:04¾, while Goldie Todd showed in her last two engagements speed when clocks won with her at Columbus.

The first trotters will be given the word on Wednesday. Natalie, the Great and Dudelle will be doubled by the tender Peter Direct set for Friday, 1917, with Mr. Dudley and Wayside to keep them busy. There should be a lively close to the day's window in the three-year-old race with Molly Knight in the champion class. Snake at Cleveland she showed that she could trot in 2:07, which is faster than any of the other nominations have traveled except Abbie Putnee, when she won in 2:06¾ at Cleveland last month. Of the others Brother Peter, Harvesta and Little Lee have trotted in 2:10.

Magnolia will appear in the Chamber of Commerce Purse for 2:03 trotters on Thursday with Mary Coburn, Bello Direct and Chris Dunphy won from Bert Kiphuk and Leo Hamilton in a foursome match. Brady scored 73.

CHAPTER CLIX.

AS we taxied to the mattress Virginia returned to the matter of Jim, but now she spoke in terms of what I knew was much nearer her heart than clothes and allowances. Another woman would probably have launched this discussion as soon as I came into her house. But Virginia—as I was now coming to understand—could never easily break down the barriers of her own reserve and pride. She had always to work herself up gradually to a point of complete frankness.

"Anne, did Jim say anything more about the way we schemed to get him into Tony's office?" she asked abruptly after two or three efforts to introduce the subject easily and naturally.

"Not about your part in it," I returned truthfully, if evasively.

"Jim was very angry at me. I don't know whether or not we're on speaking terms," said Virginia, trying to act as if it were all a joke.

"He was angry with Anthony Norreys," I said, hoping that I wouldn't have to reveal how far this anger with Tony had swept us both.

"No one could possibly stay angry at Tony long. He's the salt of the earth. Jim just doesn't know him, and it hurts his pride to think he had to accept help from Tony. You wait till Jim's riding around in his own car."

"What difference will that make?" I demanded eagerly.

"All the difference in the world! Tony's new to Jim, and that proud brother of mine hates pity or help even from his very own. So can you imagine how this Tony situation galls him?" replied Virginia with assurance.

Not Reassured

"It didn't fully reassure me however, because I feared that Jim's attitude toward Tony was one of those instinctive dislikes that go deeper than reason and so can't be dealt with by reason. Hal? Smilingly I thought of the old rhyme. "I do not like you, Doctor Fell." The reason why I cannot tell. But this is what I know full well—I do not like you, Doctor Fell."

"Yes? I can see how the situation galls Jim," I replied, "and I think the memory of it will always keep Jim from liking Tony."

"Nonsense," said Virginia allwisely.

This would have closed the discussion even if he hadn't arrived at the theatre at just that minute.

All through the play, which the applause marked as sufficiently interesting to command and hold every one else's attention, my mind kept wandering back to Virginia's suggestion. I dreaded the thought of pinning Jim down to a discussion of money matters, but it seemed to me that if I could act like a real pal insisted on a proper adjustment of our every-day affairs things really might go more smoothly between us.

By the end of the third act I was fully resolved to try the thing out "on a business basis." At the mere idea my heart thumped madly, but I thought if I "brazened it" used to our new cool friendliness in a day or two and be ready to introduce the financial element into it before long.

"Shall we go for tea?" asked Virginia, as we crowded our way up the aisle.

"I'd love to—only this is my canteen evening, and I'll be late as it is," I replied, rather thankful that I didn't have to sit at a tea table and reveal my sketchy knowledge of the play we'd just seen.

Virginia looked straight to the stalwart, bearded Virginian, as she hailed a taxi.

"Home to the canteen. My uniforms ready?

"And I have your buried dollar-bill for paying your hack," replied the man, and I gasped to myself that of course he couldn't bother Betty now and that you liked getting things through a moderator. Then Jim turned to me as with a new thought. "Why, Anne, is my brother evil-minded or jealous?"

"No, it isn't that," I answered, eager to put my half truth. "But naturally I can't always get in touch with Tony on matters of my own home affairs. So it's easier to get his fine direction from some one who can meet Tony for lunch or dinner at least half the time."

Virginia was so silent after we got into a taxi that I determined to bring my business talk to a head by asking her also felt about my friendship with the man who had once been everything in the world to her and to whom she would not now even offer a casual greeting on the street.

"Virginia, you don't mind—feel hurt—think it's disloyal to you for me to speak to—him?" I ventured stumblingly.

"Why, of course not! I think your friendship may save him from a great deal," said Virginia, with carefully averted eyes. Then she turned to me and went on with less constraint: "Because we happen to be close doesn't mean that I expect you to see only the people with whom I'm friendly. You're a free woman, you know, with a right to opinions and friendships of your own. Now that's all clear, the last barrier to our being real sisters has gone down, hasn't it, Anne?"

There was a tremor almost a pleading note in Virginia's voice. It gave me a glimpse of how empty a woman's life can be when love is gone. Almost in terror I caught her hand.

"You're generous and broad-minded, Jean," I replied. "I wish more people were like you. Indeed, I do feel we really are sisters now."

There was a moment of silence. Then Virginia turned and studied me attentively.

In the half light of the cab I fancied that my eyes were dim and wondered if she saw that mine were dim.

CHAPTER CLX.

"I'M going to ask you to act as cashier again tonight," said our lieutenant when I arrived at the canteen. "You handle the money so quickly and accurately, Mrs. Harrison, that it might be a good idea for you to give hand and take the cashier's place regularly."

"Oh, I'd much rather be a waitress and do the cashiers work just in emergencies," I replied quickly.

"That's as I took my place. In little rage, it flashed through my mind that someone else would have to go my book-since I hadn't a possession in the world with which to back a money pledge. And as I say, making change I found myself a little nation and shortly over-all. The lieutenant had just said that I had a real aptitude for handling money, but Jim didn't regard me as important enough to have any to handle. Surely, surely, I must go into the matter with him.

As a matter of fact it was many days before I found my opportunity to discuss an allowance with Jim.

In the meantime a number of other matters surged up to the surface of life and demanded immediate attention. There was no denying that these new problems had been suppressed for the time being.

Just before closing time Tom Mason strolled into the canteen and began buying candy in evident search for someone. Carlotta Sturges was on the counter at once. Then she left the cashier's plated to the waitress's care. I found myself breathing a little with relief that one should take it upon herself to see that Tom got nothing for—so I greeted him with a rather cool—

A New Arrival

"Good evening. Were you looking for some one?

It was a question unfortunately put, and I felt it so myself.

"Why, I asked the most cordial-ly—I had at first answer.

"And is well," said Tom, and then added with a thoughtful—"Take—

"Why, I'm pleased to—exceedingly glad to—then I added with a sudden fear a moment—and—that empty sleeve and heavy—

"For you particularly," returned Tom and disappeared outside to return a moment later with Pat Dalton.

Obviously that meant that he was waiting also for Carlotta and my blood rushed at the offenders that I controlled myself with difficulty. I must be paired off with a man other than my wife—married, and to another girl—and Tom, of all the men I still regarded as Virginia's husband. And the maddening part of it was that unless I made an absurd scene there was no way out.

Finally the last bow was served, the closing hour arrived, I counted the cash box and then Tom approached me with his handsome grin head flung back, but a look of sly deviltry in his eyes and an unusual devil-may-care expression in his dark blue eyes.

"I want to see you Mrs. Jimsie, I was hanging around outside waiting my chance when Pat comes along and says Jim has commissioned him to fetch you home. So we joined forces. I must see you. You won't run away with me?

"No, I won't run away," I replied wondering if his plan had anything to do with our encounter that afternoon. "I'll be ready in a minute."

"We've got to feed these Canteeners, Pat. Shall it be the Cliasagre? That's nearest and I'm sure the proprietor possible air, when Carlotta and I joined them.

Pat declined, and Tom seized my elbow and began piloting me down the street.

"Did you send you for me?" I asked breathlessly.

A New Race

"Yes, but don't let that offend you," replied Tom enthematically. Then he went on to explain, if I dropped into the office and found West on his way to keep a date with some girls, and Jim looked in talking over some matter of an equally big cussing. I asked where you came in. Jim said you were popular outdoor again, and asked me to run round and explain that he and this mining man of his might end up in a Turkish bath, and you needn't be surprised if he didn't show up all night.

"I see." I returned in a tone that I tried to keep from letting Tom know that I felt about his being made Jim's messenger, and about the message.

Exemplary office explained Tom. "Shall we start on Jim's husband's new customer in—but I'll tell. It's that new Western mining man, Lane Cushing, upstanding chap about fifty—the fellow married the sugar seven or eight years ago to marry their little Valerie Desmereau, the old fruit dealer's daughter. No one can see why a pretty girl with money and position wants to marry a man almost as old as her father. But they've got along fine so far."

"So far?" I asked, interested in spite of myself in this very human bit of gossip that seemed inspiring me on the edge of my life.

"So far?" repeated Tom. "They've been living in a little town out there and now Cushy has looked for the big city. The Cushy woman is beautiful, rich and young—the kind the other girls envy. Watch out for snares, say I."

"Well, I don't see where I come in to watch out for snares," I replied indifferently.

By now we had arrived at the chinaware and were following the captain to the corner table, which seemed to be Pat's special possession. As Pat picked up the menu and consulted us about the order Tom leaned over and answered my last remark as soulfully as if it had been a question.

"Oh, you're to be Valerie Cushy's guide and mentor when she goes here in a week or so. Jim promised her husband."

"So; I'm booked as her guide," I stammered, groping for words to hide my own unhappy realization that now indeed Jim was joining me at my word and treating me as a pal."

But all through the evening that name, "Valerie Cushy" kept flashing back into my mind.

Candies Made at Home

By Loretto C. Lynch

An Authority on Cooking and Matters Pertaining to the Home.

NO matter how well the professional candy maker makes our candies, every one of us experience a peculiar thrill when we have made some candies of our very own.

There is a dull day or two in every one's vacation. How about trying to make some candies of our own?

One of the simplest candies I know is "panoche," which means a pie plate thoroughly. Butter or oil may be used for greasing. Sprinkle a generous handful of roasted, shelled peanuts over the plate. In a clean frying pan put a pound of granulated sugar and let melt very gradually over the flame without stirring until it becomes liquid. Of course, there is any possibility of the sugar burning, at any one place on the pan, stir it a little. This prevents burning and makes undesirable lumps.

When the sugar becomes liquid, add a bit of vanilla and a cup of walnut and a tiny pinch of baking soda. Stir vigorously until the mixture is all of the same shade and pour at once over the nuts on the greased pan. Tip the pan a bit to make the hot candy spread evenly. Do not attempt to spread it with a knife.

To clean up, put the blade of the knife in the frying pan. Fill the pan with water and boil it a few minutes. The boiling melts away all stickiness.

Puffed rice or other nuts may be substituted for the peanuts.

And some day you will want to make bonbons. Beat until stiff the white of one egg in a bowl. Sift in a spoonful at a time, some fine white confectioner's sugar. Confectioner's sugar is finer than powdered sugar, and while costing the same price, gives a creamier result.

When the mixture begins to be too stiff to beat, remove the egg beater and continue mixing with a knife. Add a tablespoon of lemon juice and half a teaspoon of strong extract of vanilla. Continue adding sugar, a little at a time, until almost the whole pound is used. Dust the hands with the sugar and knead a few moments like bread. Tear off small pieces, roll into balls in the palm of the hands and press half a walnut meat on top. Set aside on waxed paper to dry.

For variety, the candy may be divided into several parts after kneading is kneaded. A few drops of orange extract or any other desired flavor may be worked in with the knife. A bit of color paste may also be worked in with the knife.

To get walnut meats out whole, strike the round side of the nut with a hammer. If the seam on the walnut is struck, the kernel will invariably break.

Color paste may be obtained at any high class grocer's or up-to-date grocery department of a first-class department store. Rose, pink, leaf green, mandarin yellow, violet, brown and orange are among the colors obtainable.

Shredded cocoanut may be mixed with some of this fondant and may be used to stuff dates or prunes after they have been steamed till plump and the stones removed.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

I DO not ask for favor, for alas I do not call, when just a little shaver I learned to hit the ball. I've had to rustle daily to earn my food and lucky but I have hustled gaily with lots of pep and spunk. I've lost no moments whining or nursing up a grouch, or passively reclining upon my downy couch. I've been too busy working and singing all the day to wait for Fortune's coming upon my uphill way. In fact, this Fortune person is such a fickle jade, my lot might be a worse one if near to one she had strayed. For if I once had viewed her as on my path she came and overmuch borrowed her. It might have queered my game. I do not want her smiling, none ever heard me squeal to win this dame beguiling. I want a good, square deal. Yes, that is all that's needed, and though I've lost a ruin, if this request is heeded, I'll try most any stunt. I have a sneaking notion no trick would be too hard upon the land or ocean with square deal for a yard. With glow or pan or sabre, though it might be unwise, I'd tackle any labor, I'd try for any prize. My days would thrill with rapture if I could only feel that I could always capture a sure-enough square deal.

Considered as a Contract

A certain business man is of opinion that he has an exceedingly bright office boy, and nothing pleases him better than to tell how he acquired the youngster's services. A notice had been posted in the office window, which read as follows: "Boy wanted about fourteen years." A lad of that age, with little that was prepossessing in his appearance, came into the office and stated that he had read the notice. "You think you would like to have the position?" asked the merchant patronizingly, as he gazed at the lad over the rim of his spectacles. "Yes, sir," was the reply, "I want the job, but I can't promise to keep it for the full fourteen years."

Household Suggestions

When the collar of a coat looks shabby and greasy, though the coat is otherwise quite fresh, take a certain rag, sip it in spirits of turpentine and rub the collar all over with it. Leave it for a few minutes, then repeat the process, afterward sponging it gently to remove any loose dirt. Then sponge it carefully with a little alcohol and keep wiping it with a clean cloth until it is nearly dry. Then hang it up until it is quite dry. If necessary press the collar with a hot iron, but on no account put a thin, white cloth between it and the iron. After this treatment the collar will look almost new again.

Fish for frying should always be dried thoroughly and dredged thickly with flour before being brushed over with egg and bread crumbs.

Sickly house plants can be improved by a few doses of nitrate of soda. A piece about the size of a marble is sufficient for a twelve-inch flower pot.

To prevent a door from banging against a wall and doing damage, fasten an old rubber heel pad to the door at such a distance from the wall as to break the force of the jar.

Butter can be kept quite firm and hard in hot weather by standing the butter dish in a soup plain of cold water and covering with a well-scrubbed flower pot, with rim resting in the water.

A little sugar and vinegar added to anything that is too salt will correct the saltness.

It's Easy to Peel Off Your Tan or Freckles

This is what you should do to shed a soiled complexion quickly and evenly: wet the face, covering every inch of skin, a thin layer of ordinary mercolized wax, this layer of wax over night; wash it off just like shaving cream the next morning. Repeat daily until your complexion is clear, soft and beautiful as a young girl's. This result is truly veritable wonder-worker for rough, tanned, reddened, blotchy, pimpled or freckled skin.—Advertisement

Great Age of Earth

NOTED SCIENTIST GIVES DATA

His Facts Set Aside the Account of Moses as Expounded in the Scriptures

By Garrett P. Serviss

(Eminent astronomer, author and writer on subjects of scientific and educational value)

"I notice that you assert, with great positiveness and in a manner that does not seem to take into consideration that there is any diversity of opinion in regard to the matter, that the earth is hundreds of thousands of years old, perhaps millions, that setting aside entirely the account of Moses, in Genesis, and the chronology of the Scriptures. Can you submit proofs and give reasons for entertaining these views that are just as indisputable as can be given regarding the laws governing the motions of the earth and the planets, together with the other heavenly bodies"—S. A. M.

YES, I can, and since your letter shows that you accept and understand the reasoning on which the conclusions of astronomers concerning planetary motions are based, I anticipate no difficulty in convincing you that the reasoning and the conclusions of geologists concerning the age and development of the earth are equally sound.

You should not overlook the fact that old Testament chronology is a very uncertain thing, although in this respect it does not differ from other ancient historical records, some of which relate to the same periods and events that are covered by the Hebrew books. Thus they tend both to corroborate and to correct one another, and, to the unprejudiced mind, both appear about equally subject to error, wherever their statements cannot be verified by still existing monuments.

You should also note the fact that the scriptural chronology, properly speaking, begins with Adam; everything preceding him being summed up in the general account, attributed to Moses, of the creation of the heavens and the earth, either "out of nothing," or out of some preceding "formless" state of matter. Now, Moses merely says that God took six "days" to make the earth and all its inhabitants, including man, who was not made until the last of these six days.

Length of Days

What was the length of those "days"? Is that word the real equivalent of the word that Moses used in his language, and if it is, did he employ it in the literal sense that we now give it, or did he use it only as a convenient term to express a period of time of indeterminate length?

Now, let us see what reasons geology can furnish for believing that by the "days" of Moses must be understood not literal days, but enormously long periods of time.

If you will make a trip to the wonderful State of Arizona they will lead you to the brink of the great Colorado Canyon, hundreds of miles in length, cut down by the water through stratum below stratum of solid rock to a depth of a mile and a half, and with the outer edges of its spreading lips several miles apart. You believe that the river which travels around it, ran and turns on its axis? Very well, then, on precisely the same kind of common sense understanding of the meaning of appearances, you cannot but believe that that tremendous trench in the earth's crust has been dug by the Colorado River. And when you compare the depth and width of the canyon with the amount of erosion that the river can accomplish in a year you will be forced to conclude that the entire period of 6,000 years which the so-called Mosaic chronology fixes as the total length of the earth's existence would be but a fraction of the time needed by the Colorado River alone to do the marvelous work that it has performed in Arizona.

As you look across the vast gulf of the canyon you will see that its opposite walls are composed of layer above layer of rocks of different kinds and origins. Some of these layers are thousands of feet thick. Away down at the bottom is Archean rock, which geologists believe (on evidence just as convincing to common sense as in any conclusion that governs your conduct in everyday life) must have been formed millions of years before the other layers resting upon it came into existence.

Algonkian Rock

On top of the Archaean you may see Algonkian rock, which, by the same kind of evidence, must be only less ancient than the Archaean. Above the Algonkian you will perceive immense strata of Cambrian and of Pennsylvanian (Coal Period) rock. Now these are known (by evidence as plain as that which convinces you that the stratum of mud in front of your door was deposited there by last night's rainstorm) to have been slowly formed at the bottom of water which flowed over Arizona when that part of the continent, instead of being elevated a mile above tide-water level, was below the surface of the sea. And just as many different layers of stratified rocks as the sliced-down canyon walls present, so many times the sea came in over the continent and rested there long enough to deposit vast sand beds, some of them thousands of feet thick, and then, as the land slowly rose, flowed off, only to return again, ages afterward, when another depression of the continent occurred.

Moses didn't know these things; or if he did, perhaps he thought that they would be of no interest to the people of his time than the simple statement that God made all in six days, and rested the seventh. You can't bring details of the geologist's reasoning by consulting any modern textbook on geology.

Discouraging

"Willie," said a father to his precocious five-year-old son and heir, "your mother tells me she gives you permission to be good. Do you think that is right?"

"Of course it is!" replied Willie. "You certainly don't want me to grow up and be good for nothing, do you?"

Mixed Summer Foods The Cause Of Much Indigestion

SUMMER days are days of careless living, kitchens too hot for cooking, cold lunches at the homes of friends, open-air picnics, with the result that many a family is down with indigestion.

Give the stomach and bowels a new start by taking a dose of a good laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then put variety into your diet by eating more warm food. It is more easily digested.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. It acts so gently and safely that it can be given even to a baby in contination, indigestion, "summer colds" and similar ills.

The formula on which Syrup Pepsin is based was written by Dr. Caldwell over 30 years ago. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that trains the stomach-muscles to do their work naturally so that medicines can again be dispensed with. Over 5 million bottles of Syrup Pepsin are sold by druggists every year. That is recommendation in itself.

If you have never used Syrup Pepsin, send your address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 460 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

SWIFT & CO. IS STRONG IN BOSTON

Aside From Packing House Shares, Local Prices Rule Lower

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

The Boston market was firm at the opening, as was the rule, but became irregular during the first hour and weak in the second. It was affected by the downward movement in New York and four of local labor troubles, by long overdue weeks in a rapid market for so many.

Swift & Co. opened strong, advancing two points on the first transaction and selling still higher later. Before noon it was up to 138. It was one of the leaders in the day's strength. The packing stocks were strong as a group, and Swift International making fractional gains while strong issues were Armour, Cudahy and Morris & Co. and late forenoon. They sold fractionally higher than current bid opened at the highest point of the day, which was the closing.

Among the miscellaneous issues were Root & Van Dervoort Waldorf, Bigelow, Mexican Investments, Valuation of Arizona Commercial, Hollis Stewart, New Haven and Fairbanks. They declined from fractions to more than a point, the latter on 300 shares sold on the exchange. Sporting Zinc dropped four points on one.

HIGH COST OF FLOUR DUE TO WHEAT

Small loaves of bread which cost the consumers more than used to is charged for by one in one of the largest and most widely dealing public. Bread is the staff of life and a staple in the diet of everyone. It is so high even in the living costs of every family. But the only one and two loaves are not to blame for the prevalence of flour and the higher prices, according to William H. Edgerly, editor of the Northfield (Vt.) Times. After referring in his publication to the fixing of the price of wheat by Congress, Mr. Edgar adds: "Suddenly the authorities suddenly awoke to the fact that the price of a barrel of flour is naturally high, and propose to make somebody suffer for it.

"The first thing to do is to find a scapegoat, and flour, being prominent among the daily needs of the individual and in the sum total of the individual's annual expenditure, one hardly can help but suffer from the high prices of wheat, which, even at present prices represents the magnificent output of farmers on four cents daily, is selected for the sacrifice.

"The farmer who receives two dollars and twenty-six cents for a bushel of wheat, as, of course, is received. No one envies him, and they dare accuse him of profiteering, but the miller and the baker are not exempt, and upon them must fall the brunt of the first savage onslaught.

"Here are the figures, based on Minneapolis:

12.26	cost of a bushel of wheat
4½	number of bushels to a barrel of flour
$10.37	cost of wheat in barrel of flour
1.20	manufacturing and selling cost
$11.37
1.75	deduction for feed produced, from wheat at $2.26 a bushel
$9.62	cost of barrel of flour at mill in bulk
.60	cost of package
.40	freight to New York
.75	jobber's margin for handling
1.25	retailer's charge for selling and delivery
$12.91	cost to customer.

"Give the millers clean wheat and they will give you cheap flour, that is all there is to it."

It is stated above how many bushels of wheat there are in a barrel of flour. It would be interesting to know how many small loaves of bread there are in a barrel of flour. A baker could tell.

Germany Losing Gold

If plenty of gold makes high prices in a country, as economists claim, everything should be cheap in Germany, but the fact disappointing to the Kaiserly foreign realm is that time the armistice began gold holdings of the Reichsbank amounted to $657,000,000. The reserve had dwindled to $253,000,000 when the last report was made. While gold decreased the currency its supports was inflated. Currency outstanding yesterday has expanded from $4,154,000,000 to $7,128,000,000 and the government proposes to issue 1,000,000,000 marks more.

Copper Output Grows

Copper output in the country is increasing, eighteen large producers mining 2,686,052 more pounds in July than in June. Production by the Calumet and Hecla group increased 768,000 pounds.

Brick Co. Elects President

George D. Dutton, who is associated with Earnest E. Smith & Co., has been elected president of the American Brick Co., which has a plant at Medfield.

New York Stocks

STEEL COMMON SAGS DURING MORNING

Large Declines by Motors, Equipments, Leathers, Oils and Specialties

Stocks were weak in New York at the start, many selling at the morning record, selling as low as 100¾ during the morning. By noon it was up to 101¼.

Among weakest issues at 12 o'clock were Crucible, off 2½ at 135; Bethlehem B., off 2¾ at 52¾; Goldwin, 3¾ at 74½; American Locomotive, 4¼ at 82½; American International, 1¼ at 41¾; Coca Cola, 3 at 74½; Westinghouse, 3¾ at 47¾; Retail Stores, 4¼ at 82¾; Reading, 2¾ at 86¾; Baldwin, 2¼ at 113¾; Mexican Petroleum, 4 at 90; Studebaker, 5 at 98; Motors, 6¾ at 84¾, and Central Leather, 2¾ at 90¾.

MARKET WEAK AT OPENING.

Selling orders accumulated over night and stocks were weak at the start and no rally came during the first hour. Among issues receiving the most attention were Crucible, American International, Baldwin, Studebaker, Central Leather, Steel, General Motors, Keystone, Mexican Petroleum, Retail Stores, Studebaker and Texas & Pacific, they receding from two to more than five points. Largest losses were shown by General Motors, Central Leather and Studebaker. The interest through out the day was centered on the Wall Street district and reports of labor troubles existing or threatening in different parts of the country were most depressing. It was not until after the close of the period, which for the first time in months, seems to be taking the place of the noon recess, that there seemed that position some time to-day and no more prominent in the Wall Street district than on Saturday afternoon. Wednesday morning was most prominent among issues which have been leaders in speculation.

COPPER MARKET DULL.

The shipment's strike on the New Haven road holds considerable copper awaiting shipment from New York to brass mills in Connecticut. It is understood that there will be no material loss before it is unloaded at its destination. Meanwhile the metal market has been dull and the producers have made no sales for a fortnight, but inquiry has been resumed and it is expected that business will improve before the end of August. Big copper producers are maintaining prices at 23¾ cents a pound for August, 24¼ to 24 cents for September and 24½ cents for October, but there is the inducement to shade them since operations who have offered spot copies at 22 cents a pound for nearby deliveries at 22 and 22¼ cents have not been able to dispose of much metal.

Cotton Active and Weak

New York, Aug. 18.—The cotton market opened weak at a net decline of 27 to 30 points on liquidation induced by foreign selling by Liverpool and the unstable foreign exchange situation. MISS MACKAYE 'VAMPS' WITH LORGNETTE

Little Leading Lady of "See Saw" Tells Real Wicked Uses of Eye Glass

By FRED J. McISAAC, Dramatic Editor.

In case you see Dorothy Mackaye, the leading lady of "See Saw," drawing around town in an overgrown blue automobile with the initials "D. M." on the doors, in important letters, don't be deceived.

It isn't hers.

It belongs to a "gee-man friend" whose initials happen to be the same as those of the little actress. Miss Mackaye is the other night, that she had been letting other members of the cast suspect her of owning the car, and she finally broke it up to the reputation of possessing such an institution was rapidly becoming a bore to her.

Miss Mackaye does own a lorgnette and she plays with a long chain, and she explained how she used it, while waiting for a cue in the wings of the Tremont.

LORGNETTE TACTICS.

"Well suppose I'm having tea at a large expensive hotel. I am nearsighted so I don't pay much attention to two gentlemen that you would call 'dudes' swaying over from across the room."

Miss Mackaye was acting out her sentences, pretending to sip tea and to chatter with an invisible girl friend. Her eyes shifted as she was expressing perfect tea-taste decorum.

"By and by I become aware of two gentlemen approaching.

"Who are those two men looking at me as rudely?" she demanded. With an graceful motion she swept the lorgnette into position, pressing a spring and the glasses flew into place. A smile of recognition darted over her little face.

"Ah, it's Mr. Lewis and Mr. Mclsaac." I bow and smile sweetly. You don't rise and come over to help us—just in front of the check.

"Believe me," said Mr. Lewis, who is a great admirer of merit and intelligence than those to slight Mac and me in a Tea Dance."

MUSICAL COMEDY EXCITING.

"Oh, I've had lemonade parties and Bevo dinner," replied Miss Mackaye, sarcastically.

"How do you like musical comedy?" I asked, in order to prevent there not being an answer at hand to her last remark.

"I find musical comedy exciting than legitimate, and I am studying singing and dancing and having a wonderful time.

"You know I went out as Peg in 'A Pair of Sixes' in 1917 companies, and then I followed Madge Kennedy in 'Fair and Warmer,' and 'Cheating Cheaters.' Then I was with Fiske two seasons as I was I have had quite a variety of parts, and I enjoy each one. I suppose I shall go back to it, but in the meantime I am thoroughly interested in singing and dancing, as well as acting."

Mr. Wilson's Private War Keeps Food Scarce and Men Starving

As the American predicted, President Wilson has deliberately attempted to play politics with the food prices. In his message to the Congress on food profiteering he tells the country that the great necessity in the reduction of the high cost of living is to pass the peace treaty and the proposed League of Nations.

Now, we do not like to say anything reflecting upon the good faith of the President of the United States. But when an intelligent man makes an important statement on an important matter which he knows is not true we cannot, in pointing out the false representations in the statement, avoid the implication that the statement is made in bad faith.

If the present distressing situation in Europe is at all responsible for the high cost of living in America, then the President himself shares the responsibility for this high cost of living. Russia and Hungary and Rumania possess the great grain fields of Europe, and President Wilson, in violation of his most solemn promise not to interfere with the right of self-determination of the Russian people, is aiding and abetting in the continuance of the blockade of Russia, by which Russians are prevented from getting railroad supplies and other machine products with which the Russian people can produce grain which will aid to feed the world.

With the consent of President Wilson, Hungary is being blockaded and overrun by Rumanians and other reactionary forces under control of the only remaining landed aristocracy in Eastern Europe. Her wheat fields are being devastated and her agricultural enterprises paralyzed, as in Russia.

This brutal war against the people of Hungary, and in support of an autocracy which the people of Hungary have sought to depose, is in violation of the right of self-determination solemnly pledged by President Wilson.

Both wars are being waged because President Wilson, Clemenceau and Lloyd George do not like the kind of democratic government that the people of Hungary and Russia have established.

So these three arbitrary dictators starve all the plain people they can, while at the same time they recognize the brutal murderers, Mannerheim and Kolchak, who have destroyed democracy and plain democratic people wherever they have found them. Furthermore, Assistant Secretary of State Polk has just announced that the United States Government purposes to aid with supplies Kolchak, the Czarist reactionary, fighting the Russian people, with the object of restoring the old Russian despotism.

If there is any condition in Europe which is responsible for the high cost of living, it is the unofficial private war which these dictators of England, France and America, in violation of every known principle of humanity, of international law, and of every one of their own personal professions and promises, are waging against Russia and Hungary.

Let President Wilson stop playing politics and attend to the high cost of living. The American people cannot be stampeded into ratification of a dangerous, despotic, un-American League of Nations by the pretense that the conditions in Europe will be cured by any such death knell to democracy.

The Wisest Thing Carnegie Ever Said

Copyright, 1919, by Star Company

Any man who, starting with nothing, has made and given away three hundred million dollars will have in the course of his career said some wise things.

Andrew Carnegie was the son of a smart Scotch mother, which is one reason why he had a keen intellect.

The wisest thing he ever said was based on his own experience, founded not on what he had seen or heard, but on what he had lived. This was it:

Civilization will deteriorate when less than 999 out of 1,000 are born poor.

With all his money and all his riches could buy, Mr. Carnegie realized the dangers of concentrated wealth and its inheritance.

If you are a young man struggling with your first opportunity to make good, you would give a good deal to be able to go to a multi-millionaire and get his advice on how to succeed.

If you are poor, if you are starting at the bottom, if you have no capital but your brains and no bank account but your energy, you can appropriate for nothing the suggestion of the millionaire who died recently that you have the very best kind of a foundation to build on, the surest basis for success.

He started work at $1.20 a week, working from sunrise to sunset.

You have a better start than he had.

Can you make as good a finish?

LET THE OTHER FELLOW WORRY

You have a project in mind, get it well under way, and let the responsibility pass on to other heads, heads or corporations.

You have an interest in the results, but are now powerless to hasten it, and no one knows when the invention of your own brain shall be on the market or be given to the public.

Granted that this is an uncomfortable situation for the enthusiastic sponsor of an idea, but does your impatience gain you anything?

You think you can stir things up, and so you keep yourself in a whirl and all you accomplish is to batter your own feelings and reduce your energy.

When matters have gone out of your control completely, forget to worry about them.

Get your mind into other channels.

Think cheerful, sunny thoughts, and be sure that everything will turn out just as you would have it.

Look so contented and peaceful and hopeful that everyone and everything you come in contact with cannot help being drawn along with the current of your silent strength.

There can be no greater success than full self-control, which is necessary to success.

A GLORY THAT IS GONE

By S. E. KISER

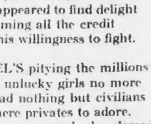
MABEL'S gladness has departed,
All her pride has oozed qway;
Once, contented and light-hearted,
Mabel warbled with the gay;
With her handsome young lieutenant
She was eager to be seen,
But she's taken down her pennant
And no longer is serene.

LIFE has lost its former glory
And become a sad old story;
Gloom appears on Mabel's brow.
Given up to sad reflection,
She is clinging to dejection—
Bertie's wearing civvies now.

WHEN she formerly displayed him
In his uniform she gave
The impression that she's made him
Trim and soldierly and brave.
Though, of course, she never said it,
She appeared to find delight
In assuming all the credit
For his willingness to fight.

MABEL'S pitying the millions
Of unlucky girls no more
Who had nothing but civilians
Or mere privates to adore.
Feeling very proud, she classed them
With the poor, and learned to scoff
As, in former days, she passed them,
Showing her lieutenant off.

LIFE has lost its charm for Mabel,
All her world is draped in sable;
She has been compelled to bow
To the fate Mischance has brought her;
Sorrow has pursued and caught her—
Bertie's wearing civvies now.



BUT HE SELDOM GETS IT

The man who asks for the benefit of the doubt usually needs it.

SHE'S A nice girl.
AND I like her.
AND MY wife likes her.
AND WE asked her out.
TO SPEND the week-end.
AND I'D been playing.
INSTEAD OF working.
AND I hadn't any copy.
FOR MONDAY'S paper.
AND I had to work.
AND AFTER dinner.
I GOT her a book.
AND A box of candy.
AND A big armchair.
OUT ON the veranda.
AND LEFT her there.
AND CAME in to my desk.
AND SAT myself down.
AND WAITED there.
TILL SOMETHING should come,
THAT I could write.
AND SHE got up.
AND CAME into the house.
AND SHE had her book.
AND SAID: "Listen to this."
AND READ me something.
AND I pretended to listen.
AND SHE argued about it.
AND WHATEVER she said.
I HAVE no idea.
BUT WHATEVER it was.
I AGREED with her.
AND SHE went back to the porch.
AND JUST at the moment
I HAD found an idea.
SHE CAME back again.
AND STILL had her book.
AND READ something more.
AND ARGUED again.
AND AGAIN I agreed.
AND FORGOT what it was.
I WAS going to write.
AND AFTER that
SHE LAID down her book
AND SAT in a chair
RIGHT CLOSE to my desk
AND WANTED to know
IF IT wasn't hard
TO WRITE something each day.
AND I said it was.
AND THEN she asked.
IF IT bothered me any.
TO HAVE her talk.
AND I said it didn't.
AND A little while later
SHE MADE up her mind.
SHE'D WRITE a letter.
AND SAT at a table.
AND STARTED it.
AND I arose.
AND GOT a paper.
AND READ it aloud.
AND TALKED about it.
AND SAID to myself
"I'LL TEACH her something."
BUT SHE kept right on
AND FINISHED her letter.
AND TALKED all the time.
AND AN hour later.
THEY ALL went to bed.
AND LEFT me alone.
AND I went to work.
AND SHE called downstairs.
THAT THE sound of a typewriter
ALWAYS LULLED her to sleep.

I THANK you.

BE CHEERFUL AS YOU BID ONE "GOOD MORNING!"

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

GOOD morning!

Where could you find a better salutation? In its unabridged form it is, "I wish you a good morning," and every one who utters it is tacitly saying:

"Here is a brand new morning. It is the only one of its kind. In all the history of the world there never has been one quite like it, and it can never be duplicated. It is entirely your own; you possess it outright until noon, and then it will spread its wings and fly from you forever. But while you have it, I hope that you will enjoy it, and that you will regret its departure."

Obviously, the tone in which this wish is conveyed should match the sentiment. It also needs an accompanying smile. But the smile is frequently omitted, and the voice is rarely in harmony with the words.

Many Ways of Saying It

There are fifty-seven different ways of saying it. Sometimes it is growled, sometimes it is barked, or snapped, or sighed, or moaned, or snarled—all of which is unjustifiable. It is the putting of a beautiful thing to base uses.

The favorite method is to say it in a curt, unpleasant way which implies, "I don't care what kind of an old morning you have. I am rather hoping that it will be disagreeable. I haven't much use for you, anyway, and I'll shed no tears if you get what's coming to you."

One woman I can think of always says "Good morning" in such a despairing, hopeless way that it is enough to darken the day and shut out the combined light of the sun, moon and stars. I don't know whether she has a bad conscience or indigestion or whether she is simply letting a grouch get the upper hand of her. But, under any circumstances, she has no right to impose her gloom on others.

If they have had something to make them happy there is no reason for her to cast a cloud over their sunshine, and if they have something to bother them, there is no reason why she should deepen and increase their troubles.

Crepe-Draped Voice a Habit

And there is no excuse for her crepe-draped voice. She has had more than the average share of good fortune, and no more worries than fall to the common lot. But she has let what was in the first place a mild, baby grouch grow to such proportions that it constantly masters her. She has gotten into the habit of fussing over every trifle; she is dissatisfied with everything and envious of others who enjoy themselves.

She is on the wrong side of the sun and sees only darkness. She has turned the whole fabric of her existence inside out and is wearing its seams outward, which is an unseemly thing to do. A bad pun, but let it stand.

No matter how beautiful the material of a garment is, it's nothing to look at if it's made with raw seams, and people would naturally regard it with disapproval.

Many persons are fond of pets. Some like cats, some dogs, others prefer goldfish or canaries; and still others choose "grouches."

These fail to understand that one tenderly cherished grouch is a much more interesting companion than a lion or tiger cub; for like the cub it will inevitably reach an age and size where it is certain to turn and bite them, and they will find that instead of being the grouch's keeper it is chefs, and rules them with a rod of iron.

EXIT LIVING FASHION MODELS

All fashionable mannikins and shop keepers take notice. You needn't worry over your "wasp" squints and more; need never fear that they will strive for higher wages while life's struggle's good in every line of industry. Science has now evolved a wonderful new automaton that walks, makes all the gestures necessary to "show off" a gown, is always ready to go to work, never complains about anything, and is not at all subject to the peculiar temptations of the lovely "mannequins" of the exclusive shops. And for a feathless beauty, necessarily—an artist's dream of loveliness made to order! A new labor-saving device, described in detail in next Sunday's

BOSTON SUNDAY ADVERTISER

MYSTERIOUS POWER IN WORDS OF A SONG

By Winifred Black

I weep like a Willet,
And mourn like a dove;
Come home, careless love,
Come home.

I HEARD it yesterday for the first time, the quaint, funny, pathetic song with the haunting refrain, and every minute since I've heard it my heart has sung it, over and over again.

The rustling of the trees outside my window, the passersby in the street, beat the measure to it with their hurrying steps, and at midnight when some great ship passed by and the watch-bell called across the dark waters I heard it again, "Come home, careless love, come home."

Yesterday, when I heard it, we sat, a party of us, in a great room with a vaulted ceiling, and quaint windows opening to a landscape that was like a dream.

Tall eucalypti stood like a regiment of ragged soldiers at the top of a neighboring hill; dark they were and purple against the sky, and all the hill was green with the sweet green of new sprinting grass. A silver mist hung between us and the valley below rose and drifted its fringes in the tops of the great trees, and far away—beneath the lower edge of the curtain of the mist—we saw the fertile plains, a great river winding to the sea, thriving villages, a clear lake like a pool of sapphire, and far away the climbing of a mighty city.

They Stopped to Listen

It was like looking upon some great vision of a fair land of promise—and the little company—chattering and gay when we dismounted at the ancient door of oak set in the wandering house like a dull jewel worn with much fondling by loving hands—grew suddenly quiet and restrained. Who and what were we to speak in the presence of such glorious beauty?

A great singer rose and sang for us, songs of valor and of wild, romantic love, music from the great operas written by the masters, and we listened and were entranced.

One spoke for us old poems and noble, and the room echoed with the sound of great words, greatly repeated.

Then the poet from his niche by the fire lifted up a careless voice, untrained and unskilled in the art of music, and sang for us a song he learned from the dark people in the far South when he was quite little and had never heard much of music or of poetry or of love.

I weep like a Willet,
And mourn like a dove,
Come home, careless love,
Come home.

The polite murmuring ceased, and it was all at once as if the fire had smouldered and the wind had ceased to blow, and the fog had lifted and the sun had gone down and the great moon rose serene upon a world of perfume and of lonely gardens.

"Come home, careless love, come home."

The hostess moved quietly closer to her young husband's side, and the young husband stretched out his hand to clasp her hand in his.

A beautiful woman dearly loved and sweetly cherished, sighed and the tears were on her cheeks.

Mysteries of the Heart

But the gay, gifted creature with the bright hair and the light voice of laughter smiled brilliantly. And when the song was done she made a light jest, and I marveled at her, for I had thought her heart was warm and tender.

When we had gone we talked it over, about the song and the singer and those who heard. And I learned that all those who went were happy and dearly cherished, while those who smiled were one whose hearts have ached at neglect and vows forgotten.

Such is the mystery of the human heart.

I weep like a Willet,
And mourn like a dove,
Come home, careless love,
Come home.

Where does he wander, in what strange fields does he find his happiness, the one who brought the brilliant smile to the lips of the woman who laughed when the poet sang?

It would be interesting to know, wouldn't it?
